THURSDAY MORNING, FEB. 6, 1862.

The Financial Question.

The best plan of raising money to carry on the existing war is now absorbing the attention of Congress, and attracting deep interest throughout the country. The Treasury is nearly empty. The Secretary addressed a note to Mr. Spaulding on Monday, in which he says: "Immediate action is of great importance. The Treasury is nearly empty. I have been obliged to draw for the last installment of the November loan. So soon as it is paid I fear the banks generally will refuse to receive the United States Treasury notes. You will see the necessity of urging the bill through without delay." The great importance of adopting the best plan for permanent use is what is deterring the movements of Congress, and not a disinclination to relieve the Treasury. The subject is of such importance, that if we were not engaged in a terrible war, the question in itself could convulse the country. The difference of opinion is on the subject of making the Treasury notes which must be issued a legal tender or not, and to make them bear interest or not. We do not profess to be very much skilled in finance, but it appears to us that the safest plan for the country is to keep the notes as near a specie basis as possible, and to make nothing a legal tender which will not be intrinsically as valuable as gold and silver, the only true standards of value the world over. Whatever kind of paper may be issued, should be immediately fortified by a sufficient tax, judiciously laid, and firmly collected. This will show the world that we intend to bear the burden of war really, and not nominally, and that it is the design of the people to wipe out this debt as speedily as possible. Congress should especially be cautious not to involve the country in the disaster which will result from the certain break down of a system of inflation caused by a vast issue of a baseless currency.

A Despairing Wail of Rebellion.

However much we may fret over the slowness of our movements, and the inactivity of our armies, it is very evident that the rebels are trembling in view of the awful overthrow which awaits them when spring opens, and the roads become passable. They are in dreadful terror of the terrible strength, and fearful energy of the loyal States, which they are at last convinced will be put forth to crush them. No better evidence of their alarm could be presented than their own language, and the desperate steps they advise their people to take.

The Provisional Confederate Government will, on the 22d of February, be merged in the regular Confederate Government. Its members from Georgia, Mr. Howell Cobb, Mr. Robert Toombs, Mr. Thomas Cobb, and Mr. Crawford, have made the change an occasion for addressing their constituents. "The first campaign is over," they say, "each party rests in peace, while the winter's snow declares an armistice; with the results in the field you are familiar; but to other important facts we call your attention." Those important facts are then stated as follows:

"First—The moderation of our government and the fanatical madness of our enemies have dispersed all differences of opinion among our people, and united them forever in the war of independence. In a few border States a waning opposition is giving way before the stern logic of daily developing facts. The world's history does not give a parallel instance of a revolution based upon such unanimity among the people.

"Second—Our enemy has exhibited an energy, a perseverance, and an amount of resources which we had hardly expected, and a disregard of constitution and laws which we can hardly credit. The result of both, however, is that power which is the characteristic element of despotism, and renders it as formidable to its enemies as it is destructive to its subjects.

"Third—An immense army has been organized for our destruction, which is being disciplined to the unthinking solidity of regulars. With the exclusive possession of the seas, our enemy is enabled to throw upon the shores of every State the nucleus of an army. And the threat is made and doubtless the attempt will follow in early spring to crush us with a giant's grasp by a simultaneous movement along our entire borders.

"Fourth—With whatever alacrity our people may rush to arms, and with whatever energy our Government may use its resources, we cannot expect to cope with our enemy, either in numbers, equipments or munitions of war. To provide against these odds we must look to desperate courage, unflinching daring and universal self-sacrifice.

"Fifth—The prospect of foreign interference is at least a remote one, and should not be relied on. If it comes, let it be only auxiliary to our own preparations for freedom. To our God and ourselves alone we should look. These are stern facts—perhaps some of them are unpalatable. But we are deceived in you if you would have us to conceal them in order to deceive you.

Excepting the assertion of the unanimity of the Southern people, these are stern facts indeed, and must be unpalatable. The energy and perseverance of the North, and the immense armies which it has placed in the field, together with the certainty of their moving, sooner or later, with a giant's tread, and the utter failure of the hope of foreign interference, are awful truths for the rebel leaders. But that they feel them to be such is still more evident from the desperate schemes they urge in defence of their desperate cause. The Georgia leaders say:

"The only question for us and for you is, as a nation and individually, what have we to do? We answer:

"First—As a nation we should be united, forbearing to one another, frowning upon all factious opposition and censorious criticisms, and giving a truthful and generous confidence to those selected as our leaders in the camp and the council chamber.

"Second—We should excite every nerve and strain every muscle of the body politic to maintain our financial and military healthfulness, and, by rapid aggressive action, make our enemies feel, at their own firesides, the horrors of a war brought on by themselves.

"The most important matter for you, however, is your individual duty. What can you do?

"The foot of the oppressor is on the soil of Georgia. He comes with lust in his eye, poverty in his purse and hell in his heart! He comes a robber, and a murderer! How shall you meet him? With the sword at the threshold! With death for him or for yourself! But more than this—let every woman have a torch, every child a firebrand—let the loved homes of our youth be made ashes, and the fields of our heritage be made desolate. Let blackness and ruin mark your departing steps, if depart you must, and let a desert more terrible than Sahara welcome the Vandal. Let every city be levelled by the flame, and every village be lost in ashes. Let your faithful slaves share your fortune and your crust. Trust wife and children to the dire refugee and protection of God—preferring even for those loved ones the charnel house as a home than loathsome vassalage to a nation already sunk below the contempt of the civilized world. This may be your terrible choice, and determine at once and without dissent as honor and patriotism and duty to God require."

Where is the confident and boastful tone of the last spring? What has become of that talk of the keenness of southern steel? Is this the language of a party that has the slightest glimpse of success? Is it not rather the despairing cry of reckless men driven to the last extremity? They see that there is no hope for them in the field, and they turn to urge their poor deluded followers to the final resort of baffled and hopeless malice. They appeal to the women and children to save the army from dishonor and their own neck from the halter. When every other hope is gone, and only then, do men abandon themselves to the atrocity of firing their homes in the face of the enemy. Chivalry has no other hope, and will expire in the flames its own hands have kindled.

The East Tennessee Loyalists.

REBEL DOCUMENTS FOUND IN ZOLLCOFFER'S CAMP.

A large amount of military correspondence was found by our troops in Zollicoffer's camp, after the battle of Somerset. Some of the developments of these letters are curious. The strength of the Union sentiment in East Tennessee is admitted by the rebel officers. Thus, Major Slasson, commanding at Lowden, Tennessee, wrote to Colonel Wood, under date of the 10th of November last:

"The Union feeling of this county is exceedingly bitter, and all they want, in my opinion, to induce a general uprising, is encouragement from the Lincoln armies. They have a great many arms, and are actually manufacturing Union flags to receive the refugee Tennesseeans when they return. They are getting bold enough."

Col. Wood, commanding at Knoxville, writes to Zollicoffer under date of Oct. 28:

"The news of your falling back to Cumberland Ford has had the effect of developing a feeling that has only been kept under by the presence of troops. It was plainly visible that the Union men were so glad that they could hardly repress an open expression of their joy. This afternoon it assumed an open character, and some eight or ten of the bullies or leaders made an attack en some of my men, near the Lamar House, and seriously wounded several:

* * * "The southerners here are considerably alarmed, believing that there is a preconcerted plan for a united movement among the Union men, if by any means the enemy should get into Tennessee."

—Again, Col. Wood writes under date of November 1:

"I do not believe that the Unionists are in the least reconciled to the [rebel] government, but, on the contrary, are as hostile to it as the people of Ohio, and will be ready to take up arms as soon as they believe the Lincoln forces are near enough to sustain them."

Zollicoffer, on the 12th of November, responded to these representations by ordering his forces to disarm the Union men. He said:

"I will to-morrow send dispatches to the forces near Jamestown, the cavalry near Huntsville, that near Oliver's, and start out the cavalry, here to commence simultaneously disarming the Union inhabitants. You will please simultaneously send orders to all detachments under your command to inaugurate the same movement at the same time in their various localities. Their leaders should be seized and held prisoners. The leniency shown them has been unavailing. They have acted with duplicity, and should no longer be trusted."

Colonel Wood, however, finally appealed to the central government at Richmond. On the 11th of November he wrote from Knoxville to Adjutant General Cooper:

"I feel it to be my duty to place this city under martial law, as there were a large majority of the people sympathizing with the enemy and communicating with them by the unfrequented mountain paths, and to prevent surprises and the destruction of public property. I need not say that great alarm is felt by the few Southern men here. They are finding places of safety for their families, and would gladly enlist if we had arms for them. I have had all the arms in the city seized, and authorized Major Campbell to impress all he can find in the hands of Union men."

And on the 20th of November Wood wrote thus to Benjamin, the rebel Secretary of War:

"I have been here at this stall on for three months; half the time in command of this post; and I had a good opportunity of learning the feeling pervading this country. It is hostile to the Confederate government. They will take the oath of allegiance with no intention to observe it. They are the followers and slaves of Johnson and Maynard, and never intend to be otherwise. When arrested they suddenly become very submissive, and declare they are for peace and not supporters of the Lincoln government, but yet claim to be Union men. At one time, while our forces were at Knoxville; they gave it out that a great change had taken place in East Tennessee, and that the people were becoming loyal. At the withdrawal of the army from here to the Gap, and the first intimation of the approach of the Lincoln army, they were in arms, and scarcely a man but was ready to join it and make war upon us. The prisoners we have tell us that they had every assurance that the enemy was already in the state, and would join them in a few days. I have to request at least that the prisoners I have taken be held, if not as traitors, as prisoners of war. To release them is ruinous. To convict them before a court is next to impossibility. But if they are kept in prison for six months, it will have a good effect."

Benjamin replied as follows:

"Your report of the 20th inst. is received, and I now proceed to give you the desired instructions in relation to the prisoners taken by you among the traitors of East Tennessee.

"First—All such as can be identified in having been engaged in bridge-burning are to be tried summarily by drum-head court-martial, and if found guilty executed on the spot by hanging. It would be well to leave their bodies hanging in the vicinity of the burnt bridges.

"Second—All such as have not been so engaged are to be treated as prisoners of war and sent with an armed guard to Tuscaloosa, Ala., there to be kept imprisoned at the depot selected by the government for prisoners of war.

"Whenever you can discover that arms are concentrated by these traitors, you will send out detachments, search for and seize the arms. In no case is one of the men known to have been up in arms against the government to be released on any pledge or oath of allegiance. The time for such measures is past. They are all to held as prisoners of war, and held in jail till the end of the war. Such as come in voluntarily, take the oath of allegiance and surrender their arms, are alone to be treated with leniency.

"Your vigilant execution of these orders is earnestly urged by the government

"Your obedient servant,

"J. P. BENJAMIN, Secretary of War.

LORD LYONS HONORED WITH THE CROSS OF THE ORDER OF BATH.—The last steamer brought letters from the English Government to the legation here, investing Lord Lyons with the Order of Bath, in acknowledgment of the value of his services in securing the peaceful and prompt settlement of the Trent difficulty—a compliment as fairly earned as gracefully paid. The on dit is, that on informing Secretary Seward of the fact, Lord Lyons remarked that the honor and compliments should have been his instead, as he felt that the settlement as made was indeed Mr. Seward's achievement rather than his. Mr. Seward, it is said, promptly replied: "Oh, no, your lordship; I have long borne my cross. It is high time you should wear yours."—Washington Star, February 3.

Pennsylvania Appointments.

The correspondent of the N. Y. Times writes from Washington on Monday:

The Senate, in their review to-day of the list of military nominations, discovered an undue proportion of Quartermasters, Paymasters, Generals, Colonels, Lieutenants, &c., nominated from Pennsylvania, doubtless through the inadvertence of the late administration of the War Department. Many were recorded from "blank" State, which blank, it was found on investigation, should be filled up "Pennsylvania." The Senate kindly undertook to equalize matters by dropping many of such names from the service.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

To Horse Owners.—Dr. Sweet's INFALLIBLE LINIMENT FOR HORSES is unrivalled by any; in all cases of Lameness, arising from Sprains, Bruises, or Wrenching, its effect is magical and certain. Harness or Saddle Galls, Scratches, Mange, &c., it will also cure speedily. Spavin and Ringbone may be easily prevented and cured in their incipient stages, but confirmed cases are beyond the possibility of a radical cure. No case of the kind, however, is so desperate or hopeless but it may be alleviated by this Liniment, and its faithful application will always remove the lameness and enable the horse to travel with comparative ease.

Every horse owner should have this remedy at hand, for its timely use at the first appearance of lameness will effectually prevent those formidable diseases mentioned, to which all horses are liable, and which render so many otherwise valuable horses nearly worthless.

EATON'S INFANTILE CORDIAL, an article which every Mother should have in her medicine closet in case of need; and containing, as it does, no paregoric or opiate of any kind; it can be rested upon with the utmost confidence, and will be found an invaluable specific in all cases of infantile complaints. —Ohio State Journal, Columbus.
