

Another Battle—Another Victory

The other day the East was dis-abled by a shot through her bolts, causing a fearful loss of life. The last force took part in the action, arriving too late to share in it. Two rebel Generals, one Colonel, two Captains and one hundred privates were taken prisoner. The capture of high officers is important, and will facilitate an escape of prisoners. We believe they have none of our Generals, as yet. The important result of this victory is the occupation of the Memphis and Ohio Railroad Bridge, on the Tennessee, fifteen miles south of the river, in Tennessee. The occupation of this bridge, although a success, is not a final communication between Memphis and Columbus with Nashville and points east, yet it compels the rebels to the adoption of a round-about way, by the southern route through Northern Alabama.

WHAT THE REBELS SAY ABOUT THEM

Our Commissioners are not to be received. Ex-Governor Foss and Bishop Ames were, at least accounts, at Fort Mifflin, awaiting an answer to their application to be permitted to visit our prisoners with Richmond. They will probably not be permitted to go on. So we infer from the following articles from Richmond papers: WHAT THE REBELS SAY ABOUT THEM. [From the Richmond Examiner, Feb. 4.] We are assured that our government will deny permission to the Governor Fish and Bishop Ames, the rebel Commissioners sent from Washington to confer the Yankess prisoners in our hands. We hope that this is so, and that "the wish is not father to the thought." Such a mission is tantamount to a declaration of war, and a danger to our cause, and comes from an enemy who has refused us the commonest courtesies of war. It is a mission which Bishop Ames and his coadjutors are to bring them to the North. By a special act of Congress they are allowed the same relations as our soldiers in the field, and General Winder has been ordered to young Yankee captives being taken to the hospitals to be housed in the families of physicians in this city, and to be fed with sugar plums by the ladies, we suppose their condition is quite comfortable and can be expected under the circumstances. [From the Richmond Dispatch, Feb. 3.]

THE FINANCE MEASURE

The financial project for the issue of Government paper, to meet the expenses of the war, has been introduced in the Senate under class in. There has been a wide difference of opinion in relation to the policy of making the notes a legal tender, and provisions of financial relief have been introduced in the House, and it is expected that both sides are no doubt mistaken. The whole question is of immense importance to the country, and we trust Congress has gone to a wise conclusion. The President has said the Senate will hasten to relieve the Treasury from impending bankruptcy, by passing the bill through that body. A dispatch from Washington, on Wednesday evening, says that the bill has passed the Senate by a vote of 70 to 20. The bill is a measure of relief, and is expected to pass the House by a vote of 70 to 20. The bill is a measure of relief, and is expected to pass the House by a vote of 70 to 20.

General Beauregard's Report

The report of the "Battle of Manassas" as Beauregard calls the battle of Bull Run, has, after a delay of nearly seven months, been published. It is a paper of great length, and gives a detailed account of the various phases of the battle, but says nothing of the reasons for delaying the publication. Receipts of the Blaver Gordon

It has been already stated that the President has repaid the slave-trader Captain Nathaniel Gordon, $25,000, for his services in the New York rebellion. (Friday) for two weeks. A great deal of dissatisfaction has been expressed at this reprieve, but the reasons given for it by the President are entirely satisfactory, and it is expected that no further clamor will be extended. The official copy of the President's order was sent to the printer on Thursday morning, and the order was signed by the President on Friday, the 10th day of February, A. D. 1862. The Colliery Accident in England

Dreadful Catastrophe in the Hartley Colliery. Two hundred and fifteen Miners Buried Alive—The "Pinning of the Bells." We have already announced the fact of a fearful accident at the mine known as the "Hartley New Pit," near Newcastle, England. The arrival of the mail of the Nova Scotia places us in possession of the details of the affair—one of the most appalling catastrophes that the annals of record contain, involving the loss of probably two hundred or more.
