press train bound east, and a freight train bound west. One of the Rodebaugh girls called the attention of the others to the fact that a train was approaching them from each direction, and romarked that they had better leave the road. Deceased replied that the freight train would pass them before the Express came up, and that then they could get on the other track in time to avoid the Express; but just as the freight was passing them at the short curve on this side of the Tunnel, the Express came thundering down upon; them, and escape for Mary Moultan, who was walking on the north rail of the south track, was impossible, and the result was that she was mangled and cut up in a most horrible manner. The Rodebaugh girls escaped by throwing themselves from the road."

Dearn at Drowsing.—On the first inst., as old man named Duffy, while walking in company with his wife along the tow path, about a quarter of a mile above Bairdatewn, Westmoreland county, ancientally missed his footing and fell into the slack water of the Conemaugh river, and was drowned. His rescue was attempted by his wife, who waded into the river as far as she could with asfety; her efforts, however, were futile, as the body driffed out beyond her reach, and her cries for help were unsuccessful.

The reorganization of the Pittsburgh, Ft. Wayne and Chicago Railroad Company is to be finally accomplished on the 26th of this menth, as will be seen by a notice in another column. The bondholders having become liable for the purchase money, are, by the act of the Assembly, the only party entitled to vote at the first election. At all subsequent elections, both stock and bondholders enjoy the right to vote at all elections or mentions. the right to vote at all elections, or meeting touching the interest of the new Corporation

The correspondent of the St. Louis Dem-The correspondent of the St. Louis Dem ocrat gives a most satisfactory account of the manner in which Messra. Ford and McBride, the pilots of the gunboat Essex, were scalded to death. After describing the part which the Essex had taken in the engagement, up to the moment when a ball came hisning immediately over the forward port gun, he says:

"This terrible messenger of death flew along the ship, through the bulkheads which were to protect the machinery of the boat, and crashed into the middle boiler. Immediately, with a rushing sound, the scalding steam filled every part of the vessel. The two pilots, who were standing nobly at their work, so absorbed, as it seemed, in their duties that they had neglected to close the trap door which leads from below to their house, were enveloped by the blistering vapor and almost immediately scalded to death. They made a desperate struggle to get out of the pilot house, running their arms through the look-out holes which were not large enough to pass their bodies, and vainly striving to get their heads through for fresh air. The tars who had stood so gallantly to their guns, were appalled at this new and terrible enough, and many of them were seen to throw themselves out of the portholes into the river." manuer in which Messrs. irem whom we gather the following information:

The enemy advanced in full force upon Elizabeth City yesterday about seven o'clock, and began an attack upon that place. The citizons finding resistance in vain, evacuated
the place, but before doing so they set fire to the town, and when our informant left it was still in flames.

We have also to record the capture by the enemy of all our little fleet, except the Fanny

It is said that before our boats surrendered they were abanded, and that the crews succeeded in making their escape. If so, we are at a loss to conjecture why they were not are defore they were abandoned.

The disaster to our little fleet is attributed to the fact that, having exhausted their supply of coal and ammunition they proceeded to Elizabeth City for the purpose of obtaining asupply. Every effort was made to obtain coal, but without success, and they returned to the Island to lend any assistance whatever to our forces.
