To it not a hostile act to tear down the American flag, on American territory, and to hoist another, and a hostile flag in the place?

All these hostile acts had been committed before Semator Brion wrote his letter, and the letter itself was addressed to the Chief trailer of them all, and addressed to him, too, in his official capacity as a rebel—as President of the Confederate States. Hard related must Mr. Briony's friends be, and count in camp, or cyang or wounces when he altered to the Great for the Mahington is over; and predict for the White House, and for the Government, a more happy and popular career in future. Embodemed by success, the Heradd's representative man played a bold game when he attempted to bully the new War Minister, and he lost all. He now cools his ardor in fort McHenry, and rely upon it, if Bennett is not extremely careful, himself will soon suffer a like fate.

The United States steamer, Baltic, which life Port Royal on the 10th, and arrived at New York on Thursday morning, has brought the important intelligence that two formidable expeditions had been fitted out, and at the time the steamer left, were ready to proceed to their respective destination—one, consisting of twelve regiments of infantry, and three of cavalry, to leave on the 10th, destined to advance inland to the railroad, and thrence to ce of the N. Y. Tribune. Washington, Feb. 11, 1882.

GEN. STONE'S ALLEGED TREASON.

One of the Proofs Against Him. Suspicious Conduct of Other Officers.

The action regarding Gen. Stone excites no surprise among those who have been familiar with his conduct the last six months. That was a singularly impressive scene presented in the Presbyterian Church at Paducah, on Sunday, as described by a correspondent of a St. Louis paper. Commodore Foote, with his men, went to church. The cies, while his own course has made him an presches did not arrow to the control of the course has made him an online. cles, while his own course has made him an object of quite general suspicion. The discovery of his treasonable communication with the enemy is said on good authority to have happened in this wise:
