U.S. Flag Stramer Philadelphia,

Off Roanoke Island, Feb. 9, 1862.

Roanoke Island is ours. Its military authorities struck to us yesterday. Their means of defense was truly formidable, and they were used with a determination worthy of a better cause. They consisted of two elaborately constructed works, mounting together twenty two heavy gans, three of them being 190-pounder rifles; four other batteries, mounting together twenty gans, a large proportion of them being also of large calibre, and some of them rifled; eight steamers, mounting two guns each, and each having a rifled gin with the diameter of a 32-pounder; a prolonged obstruction of sunken vessels and plies to thwart our advance, and altogether a body of men numbering scarcely less the sund in the thousand, of whom three thousand are now our prisoners.

The fighting commenced on the morning of the 7th inst., at 11 colock, and was continued until dark. The following morning, it was resumed at an early hour and it lasted until was resumed at an early hour and it lasted until was resumed at an early hour and it lasted until was resumed at an early hour and it lasted until was resumed at an early hour and it lasted until was resumed at an early hour and it lasted until was resumed at an early hour and it lasted until was resumed at an early hour and it lasted until was resumed at an early hour and it lasted until was resumed at an early hour and it lasted until was resumed at an early hour and it lasted until was resumed at an early hour and it lasted until was resumed at an early hour and it lasted until was resumed at an early hour and it lasted until was resumed at an early hour and it lasted until was resumed at an early hour and it lasted until was resumed at an early hour and it lasted until dark. It appears that considerable supplies of cotton may still be found on Edisto Island, if a reconnuissance in force should be made. Regress report there are small quantities of cotton hidden in various localities, and small quantities unginned are to be found on nearly all of the plantations on Edisto Island, the soldiers not having been there to burn the cotton houses, as they did on the opposite shore, on the arrival of the Pawnee, accompanied by the Seneca.

The dispatches say it is worthy of note, as indicating the changes in the blacks, that now they express themselves most anxious to obtain arms. The black man, who has general superintendence of the colony, wished to land his forces in Rockville, and drive the rebel soldiers back, expressing the utmost confidence that with about twenty old muskeds, which they picked up, many of them with finitions, he would be able to effect his object.
