Pittsburgh Gazette.

FRIDAY MORNING, FEB. 21, 1862.

The Alarm of Southern Sympathizers.

The New York Herald daily invokes its Southern friends to hasten to make its peace with the Government, in order to save slavery. It tells them that it is useless to struggle longer, and that by making a virtue of necessity, it may save slavery from the overthrow which threatens it. It also calls upon the Government to proclaim an amnesty for all political offences, and thus coax the rebels back by promising them that their rights to their slaves shall be respected. The Journal of Commerce, another secession sympathizer, also makes a proposal, that the President should immediately issue a proclamation "offering satisfactory terms of adjustment," promising the slaveholders that their peculiar institution shall be religiously preserved and protected, and that "no further interference with the domestic slavery of the South by northern incendiaries" shall be allowed, if they will only consent to come back into the Union. The Government and Congress must endeavor "by every act to win the favor and good opinion of the South," and "prove that no abolition administration holds its reins," and so forth. The Journal thinks that if the slaveholders were only satisfied of this, they would turn against themselves and undo their own work. Here are its words:

"The hope of the Union is that the influence of abolitionism may be so thoroughly overcome that the South will be willing to make a revolution again and overcome their own revolt."

Who inaugurated the rebellion? Slaveholders! What for? To subserve the interest of slavery—slavery was to be the corner stone of the new edifice. Their ultimatum was, slavery must rule, or separation. Now their Northern friends, seeing their case hopeless, wish the President to make a proclamation of non-interference with slavery, which they scouted one year ago. After involving the nation in untold losses and misery they are now to be bribed to come back, by a promise, or sort of treaty, which the President or no other power outside of the Constitution has a right to make, of protection to slavery. No, no! No treaties with traitors. Drive them back, on and on, until the last rebel lays down his arms, and submits to such clemency as the Government may give. As to the slavery question, the people of the loyal States, whose blood and treasure has been freely offered, have something to say in its settlement.

THE Post, of yesterday, in answer to our rebuke of its detestible partisanship, says:

Now, the Gazette may fume and bustle as long as it pleases, and put on as many airs as possible, about its superior patriotism, still we shall insist upon our share of the glory achieved by our armies, and contend too for the rights of all our people being respected by those who undertake to manage our public rejoicings.

We have never boasted of our superior patriotism. We have never claimed that the Republicans did all the fighting. We have never said a word in disparagement of the share the Democrats have had in this holy crusade against rebellion. We have never thought of drawing political distinctions among those who fight the battles of our country. We have left all such contemptible comparisons to the Post, which is about the only paper in the country that has resorted to such pitiful subterfuges to keep up a decaying party organization. We most joyfully testify that thousands upon thousands of gallant citizens, who have hitherto acted with the Democratic party, and may probably do so again, have rushed to the field of battle, and have been ready to lay down their lives for their country. And we venture to say they have never inquired whether the comrade who stood at their side in the bloody affray was a Democrat or Republican. It was enough that he was a loyal American citizen soldier, and that was all they cared to inquire for. They did not go mousing about to ascertain whether he belonged to his party or some other. He may have been an abolitionist, a class whom the Post daily abuses and slanders, of the deepest dye. They cared nothing for that. He was a brother soldier, who endured the same hardships, and was as ready as they to lay down his life for his country. Let the Post editor go to the camps in Kentucky, after one of the gallant fights they have there, and tell the soldiers that the "Democrats do the fighting," and he would quail before the honest indignation of the insulted soldiery.

The Post systematically endeavors to disparage the patriotism and loyalty of distinguished Republicans, because they honestly believe that the future peace and welfare of the country would be promoted by putting an end to a system of human oppression which even that paper dare not defend in this community, and which is a disgrace to the age and to the country. Not one of these men has ever been charged with disloyalty. They have been among the foremost in the ranks of the noble band who have rushed to the rescue of the life of the nation, when endangered by the pusillanimity and disloyalty of a Democratic administration. These men whom the Post daily derides and slanders are all loyal. No treason is found in their skirts—no traitor among their number. If treason is to be sought for, you must go to Democratic ranks. If traitorous resolutions are passed, it is in Democratic meetings. If sympathy with rebels is manifested, it is in Democratic Conventions and newspapers, and if a traitor is to be hurled from the Senate, he is a Democrat of the first water. Treason, in the loyal States, is alone found among Democrats.

We do not consider this any disparagement to loyal Democrats. We hail them as brothers in a glorious cause, but we must confess to a feeling of natural indignation to have cast in our face, as has been done by the Post more than once, that the Democrats do the fighting. Such arrogant assumption and flagrant mendacity deserved the chastisement we inflicted.

THE PRO-SLAVERY VIEW OF TREATING THE SOUTH.—In his speech in Stark's case, Carlile, of Virginia, on Monday, foreshadowed the pro-Slavery policy of the treatment of the rebel States, saying the Senate must receive persons duly accredited hereafter by the Legislature of Mississippi, even if they have been in arms against the Government. It is generally hoped that Carlile will be obliged thus to give his seat back to Mason.

The Lane Expedition.

A Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune says:

"It is at last decided that the Lane expedition is to be given up. General Lane telegraphed to the Hon. John Covode—who made the arrangements in his behalf with Mr. Cameron—on Friday night, that all attempts to harmonize matters with Gen. Hunter had failed. Mr. Covode called on Secretary Stanton on Saturday to see if anything further could be done to forward Gen. Lane's wishes. Failing in this, Lane was telegraphed yesterday to return to the Senate, which he will probably do at once. Mr. Covode and other friends of Lane's have been from the outset entiring in their efforts to procure him such a command as he desired, having full faith in his proposed plan of operations. The Administration was not unwilling to accede to their wishes, but the responsibility of arranging with Gen. Hunter was left with Lane, and he seems to have miscalculated as to the readiness of the former to allow him the personal command of the proposed expedition."

A correspondent of the World, writing from Leavenworth, says:

"Gen. Lane's friends out here are very wroth. But the General himself gets no further, as to the exterior anyhow, than a little vexation. I shouldn't be at all surprised, however, if, upon examination of his interior human heart, he was found to be looking upon himself as a slightly Delilahed Sampson, as a manacled man-of-war, as a blind-folded and caged cockatrice, whose glance upon the demon of disunion was denied lest it should indeed accomplish the demon's decease."

In contradiction to the above, on the 12th inst., General Lane, in a speech at Leavenworth, declared emphatically that there was no misunderstanding existing between Gen. Hunter and himself, and that, if he could not serve freedom as a commander, he would as a private soldier.

We incline to the opinion that Gen. Lane can do more good in the Senate than by going on an expedition to the South at this time, when the rebellion is yielding to the powerful blows of our armies in Kentucky. The Senate will soon become the centre of more attraction than the army, as there and in the House, the great battle of restoration, or restruction, or whatever else it may be called, will have to be fought.

Colonel Garfield, of Ohio--Well Deserved Promotion.

When so many incapables, of the martinet and other species, have succeeded in getting themselves pitchforked into Brigadier Generalships, it is an occasional luxury we enjoy to record that a Brigadier General can be made out of different material,—of better and 'sterner stuff'? Thanks to the President and his Secretary of War, the brave and earnest patriot, who cleared Humphrey Marshall and his rebel hordes, and with them rebellion itself, out of Eastern Kentucky—Colonel Garfield, of the 42d Ohio—was, some days ago, nominated a Brigadier General. His name came before the Senate on Wednesday, when the appointment was promptly confirmed. As senior Colonel of the 18th Brigade, entrusted with the work aforesaid by General Buell, he has been practically the commander of a brigade for some time past;—hence, in this case, the title conferred by the President, and confirmed by the Senate, will designate a reality—something that has got into the shape of a fact before its name is cried in the streets.

A respected contemporary says of this appointment:

Col. Garfield, whose brilliant and effective campaign in Eastern Kentucky has won for him so much distinction, has been appointed Brigadier General, as we learn by a private dispatch from Washington. Gen. Garfield is an earnest man. His heart is in the work which he has undertaken, and in no way will he be retarded by a tenderness for the rebels. He is a man of brains, too. As for military talent, he has given evidence of that by freeing Eastern Kentucky from the bondage to which the people had been subjected by the secessionists, marching through a rough country, where other divisions said they could not move at all."

—In every word of which testimony we fully and most cordially concur. We have faith in a man like Gen. Garfield, who, if need be, will take off his coat to fight the rebels.

SENATORIAL WIT.—When the Secretary of the Senate, Mr. Forney, read the dispatch announcing the victory at Fort Donelson, there was loud applause in the galleries. The following dialogue took place:

The Vice President—That's Right! The chair rules that the cheering in the galleries was not in applause or censure of any action of the Senate, and they would not, therefore, be called to order.

[A dispatch from a rebel source was afterwards read, confirming the first account, when the applause in the galleries was renewed.]

Mr. Foster—I would inquire of the chair if it is in order to applaud a rebel dispatch. [Laughter.]

The Vice President—It is, when such a dispatch is reliable and true. [Laughter and applause.]

AN IMPORTANT RUMOR.—It is currently reported at Washington that Alexander H. Stephens, the recently elected Vice President of the rebel Confederacy, has resigned that office, and urges the return of the seceded States to the Federal Union.

Rats desert a sinking ship.

ALL FLAGS OUT!—A dispatch from Cape Race says that fifty flags, all they have got there, were flung to the breeze on the 18th inst., in honor of the glorious victory at Fort Donelson. At St. John's, Newfoundland, also, the news was received with equal satisfaction.

IT is known that it is the opinion of President Lincoln, as a lawyer—and no man can dispute his profoundness in respect of all constitutional questions—that the rebellion of the Southern States against the Republic has, in fact, converted all their slaves into freemen. In this matter, we understand that Mr. Lincoln holds substantially the opinions set forth in the resolutions which Mr. Sumner lately offered in the Senate; and we now find in the Continental Monthly a statement that the same views are shared by the Secretary of War. That periodical attributes to Mr. Stanton the following language:

"First and foremost, I believe slavery to be the casus belli. To treat the casus belli above and beyond all other considerations I hold to be the duty of the true commander-in-chief: as the surgeon disregards secondary symptoms and probes the wound. I would treat this casus belli as the Constitution allows us to treat it—not one hair's breadth from the grand old safeguard would I step. Under the Constitution, I believe slavery to be a purely local institution. In Louisiana and Texas, a slave is an immovable by statute, and is annexed to the realty as hop-poles are in the law of New York. In Alabama and Mississippi, the slave is a chattel. In the first named States he passes by deed of national act and registration; in the other, by simple receipt or delivery. Thus even among slave States there is no uniform system respecting the slave property. To the Northern States the slave is a person in his ballot relation as congressional quota and constituency, and also an apprentice to labor, to be delivered up on demand. The slave escaping from Maryland to Pennsylvania is not to be delivered up, nor cared about, nor thought about, until he is demanded. Liberty is the law of nature. Every man is presumed free in choice, and not even to be trammeled by apprenticeship, until the contrary is made clearly to appear. One man may be a New York discharged convict, for instance—an unpardoned convict. He emigrates southward, he obtains property, according to local law, in a slave. The slave escapes to N. Y. The convict—unpardoned—master enters the tribunal there on his demand. Quoth the escaped apprentice, producing the record of the conviction, 'Mr. Claimant, you have no standing in court. Your civil rights are suspended in this State until you are pardoned. You are not pardoned, therefore I will not answer aye or no to your claim, until you are legitimately in court, and recognized by the judges.' I take it that plea would avail. An if the crier wanted to employ a person to sweep the court-room the next moment, he could employ that defendant to do it. There is not a man in the rebel States whom we publicly know of) who has a standing under the Constitution regarding this Slavery question. By his own argument, he lives in a foreign country; by our own argument, he is not rectus in curia. Were I an invading general and wanted horses, I would decoy them from the rebels with hay and stable enticements. If I wanted trench-diggers, camp scullions, or artillerists, or pilots, or oarsman, or guides, and, being that general, saw negroes about me, I should press them into my service. Time enough to talk about the rights of some one to posses the negros by better claim of title to service when that somebody, with the Constitution in one hand and stipulation of allegiance in the other, demands legal possession. . . . I believe that the acknowledged fact, the necessary fact, that wherever our army advances, emancipation practically ensues, will carry more terror to the slave owner than any other warlike incident. But I would have them understand that this result is not our design, but a necessity of their rebellion."

Whether or not these are really the ideas of Mr. Stanton, we have, of course, no other means of knowing than the evidence of their publication in The Continental Monthly. If they are falsely ascribed to him, the truth will soon be made known. For our part we cordially give Mr. Stanton all the support in our power, because we know him to be terribly in earnest in putting down the rebellion and vindicating the national integrity. Any man of that sort is a good enough antagonist of Slavery for us, whatever his theoretical opinions may heretofore have been.

CAUSE OF APPREHENSION.—It is the opinion of many of our ablest men that the chief cause of apprehension now is, that the enemy having held Manassas as long as the position could be of service to him, and seeing that a new line of defense must now be adopted in consequence of the operations of the Northern expeditions, and of the army in Kentucky and Tennessee, will quietly withdraw with all his munitions to a line further South, thus prolonging the war into another year. It is feared that the strategy of Johnston before the battle of Bull Run will be repeated on a larger scale by the same General at Manassas, and that some future "reconnoissance" by the army of the Potomac will disclose the fact that the rebels have left us their deserted fortifications. Gen. McClellan will doubtless take good care that he is not made to play the role of Patterson.

We have seen an extract from a private letter, dated New Orleans, December 10th, written by a gentleman of influence, which, speaking of the tendency of public feeling in that city, says: "There is a great deal of suffering in New Orleans. All the papers are issuing half sheets. There exists a large Union sentiment, and people are beginning to express their opinions pretty freely; there is no doubt that on the approach of the federals the city will be surrendered without any fighting."

SPECIAL NOTICES.

To Horse Owners.—Dr. Sweet's INFALLIBLE LINIMENT FOR HORSES is unrivalled by any; in all cases of Lameness, arising from Sprains, Bruises, or Wrenching, its effect is magical and certain. Harness or Saddle Galls, Scratches, Mange, &c., it will also cure speedily. Spavin and Ringbone may be easily prevented and cured in their incipient stages, but confirmed cases are beyond the possibility of a radical cure. No case of the kind, however, is so desperate or hopeless but it may be alleviated by this Liniment, and its faithful application will always remove the lameness and enable the horse to travel with comparative ease.

Every horse owner should have this remedy at hand, for its timely use at the first appearance of lameness will effectually prevent those formidable diseases mentioned, to which all horses are liable, and which render so many otherwise valuable horses nearly worthless.

Would respectfully invite the attention of their friends and the public generally that they have purchased the stock at a very low figure, and which they will make up at a small profit in order to close out the stock to make room for a full new stock of Goods in the spring. ja8

HAPPINESS OR MISERY? THAT IS THE QUESTION.—The Proprietors of the "PARISIAN CABINET OF WONDERS, ANATOMY AND MEDICINE" have determined, regardless of expense, to issue free (for the benefit of suffering humanity) FOUR of the most interesting and instructive Lectures on Marriage and its Disqualifications, Nervous Debility, Premature Decline of Manhood, Indigestion, Weakness or Depression, Loss of Energy and Vital Power, the Great Social Evil, and those Maladies which result from Youthful Follies, Excesses of Maturity, or Ignorance of Phytosophy and Nature's Law. These Invaluable Lectures have been the means of enlightening and saving Thousands, and will be forwarded Free on receipt of Four Stamps, by addressing DR. CERENAY, Parisian Cabinet of Anatomy and Medicine, 563 Broadway, New York. ja29:1md

LINDSEY'S IMPROVED BLOOD SEARCHER,

The genuine article, prepared by the original inventor,

DR. J. M. LINDSEY, Hollidaysburg, Pa.

For sale by SIMON JOHNSTON,
Corner Smithfield and Fourth streets.

HOW TO PROCURE THE GENUINE.—Pay no attention whatever to unauthorized puffs in the local columns of newspapers. They are intended only for the unsuspecting, and as a game of "Shoo, Thief." Ask yourself, Who first invented the Blood Searcher? To whom are the authentic certificates addressed? Who continues to manufacture it in the same uniform scientific manner? The answer to all of which is, DR. J. M. LINDSEY. fe11:1ww
