The glory of this victory is due altogether to the land forces, the fleet not taking part in the contest. Battery after battery was stormed by our gallant soldiers, until the enemy were driven into their stronghold, where they ralled and made a desperate stand. Our brave men fought until their ammunition was all gone, and then charged with fixed bayonet. The cold steel was too much for the southerners. The glistening bayonets made them scamper in double quick. However much they may fanny the Bowie-knife the scentain they have no fancy for the bayonet. The fight lasted some four or five hours. The enemy had about eight thousand men, behind strong intrenchments, mounted with heavy siege guns. Our force was about ten thousand strong, just landed from the ships, and they were disapponted in the expected aid of the gunboats. These intrenchments were probably stronger than any at Centreville or Manassas, and yet our gallant soldiers walked over them, and gained a glorious victory. Is it not absosolute certain that our equally brave troops on the Potomac would have walked over the rebelintrenchments which have so long been magnified into a Gibraltar, if they had the opportunity.

The steady, solid, irresistible march of the free soldiers of the North, seems to appal those whose boasting have filled the world. Like Balshazzar in the presence of the mysterious hand writing on the wall, they see their doem wriften on all the Northern heavens, and hear the sound of the advancing march on every Northern breeze : and their knees smite together for fear. "John Brown's soul marching on." has a terror for them which is indescriba ble. Like some awful night-mare, it sits with stifling weight upon their hearts, destroying courage and manhood.

There is almost a universal complaint of Davis' cabinet, but the traitor President holds on to them. Probably he cannot do better. They are among his earliest and most tried friends, and he thinks they might as well hang together. Great alarm exists at Memphis and no

To stop the mouths of all mischief-makers, who ought to be too contemptible in the eyes, of the women to be able to frighten them, we are authorized to say that Gen. Bragg has gone on an important service to the cause of which he is one of the most palle and devoked defenders. He has gone upon the invitation of Gen. He will be within a few hours reach of the city, and steam and electricity can bring him back before the enemy could make his first dispositions for a land or sea sitack. Meantime, he has left the city with a complete plan of defense matured, and the defenses in the hands of accomplished officers. Gen. Jones, now chief of the army at Pensecola, will assume command here, and will be ably seconded by Col. Villipigue, the here of Fort McRae.

FLOTD is in a bad fix. He has been suspended by President Davis, and is denounced for cowardice. The Memphis Eveniny Argus says:

RESULTS.

Notwithstanding this appears like a reverse to our arms, there need be no fear entertained about the safety of Fort Craig or New Mexico. The fort is in a strong position, garrisoned by near six thousand troops, and thanks to our Chief Commissary of Subsistence, is provisioned for forty days. There are also forces at Albaquerque, who are on the eve of marching below, and there is abundance of troops in the different posts to defend any point of attack.

The tone of all the letters from below is hopeful and full of confidence. The greatest confidence is reposed in Colonel Canby, and if the volunteers will do their duty the Texanswill be ignominiously driven from the country.

Of all cities in the south, Richmon's and Charleston not excepted, Memphis was the most malignant, unscrupulous and crue. It is well, no doubt, to treat the citizens of Nashville with that scrupulous regard for persons and property which characterizes Gen. Buell's army; but when we acquire Memphis, for Heaven's sake let us have no rose-water policy there. If the city which has scourged the backs, shaved the heads, and drank the blood of so many inoffensive men, simply because they are loval, and different posts. At the various storehouses in the department there is abundance of supplies of stores for six thousand men until the first of June next.

The financial ruin of the South.

The inancial ruin of the South is insvitable. Their whole circulation has been an able to the fact, it can do no harm to say that very many of our regiments were yesterday evidently preparing for a grand movement somewhere—whether to push on against these pass well enough, but as our army advances, they become worthless, and thus some two hundred millions of a circulating medium will finally, and within a few months, fall dead in the hands of the people. So great and sudden a depreciation in values was hardly ever known, and must prostrate the South into complete financial ruin.

f neglected, often terminates seriously. Few are aware of the importance of stopping a Raugh or Glight Rald in its first stage; that which in the beginning would yield to a mild remedy, if not attended to, soon attacks the lungs. A roun's A ronchial Troches vere first introduced cleven years ago. It has been proved that they are the best article before the public for Loughs, Bolds, Aronchitis, Asthma, Latarrh, the Hading Cough in Bonsumption, and numerous affections of the Shraat, giving immediate relief. Public Speakers & Singers will find them effectual for clearing and strengthening the voice. Sold by all Oruggists and Dealers n Medicine, at 25 cents per box.
