Pittsburgh Gazette.

THURSDAY MORNING, MARCH 20.

AFTER reading the magnificent oration delivered by WENDELL PHILLIPS, in the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, some days ago, from which we have made such copious extracts this morning, we are exceedingly gratified to find that our excellent Lecture Committee of the Mercantile Library Association have engaged the distinguished lecturer to visit our city and give one of his spirit-stirring addresses to as many of our citizens as can assemble in Concert Hall to-morrow evening.

Governor Sprague on Slavery.

No man has won more honest fame in the course of the present war than the youthful Governor of Rhode Island. His promptness in forwarding troops when the rebellion broke out, his personal services in Washington, and his gallantry in the field of battle, have alike contributed to his distinction. He was justly renominated for the place he holds by the political convention of his party, and is cheerfully supported by men of all parties. But Governor Sprague, in accepting the nomination of the Democratic Convention, was too wise to commit himself to the absurd and effete resolutions of that body of politicians. The old issues, he is well aware, have passed away, and new issues are presented. The Boston Transcript quotes from the Providence Review and Journal, of Thursday, a long address from his pen, in which he speaks very plainly of the questions raised by the war. He says:

"It is a superficial view, therefore, of the present national crisis, which supposes that this conflict can end and leave things as it found them * * * * *

We must cross this flood that swells and foams, or abandon the national hopes of a glorious future. The issue already made between oppression and liberty must be fought out to the end now, or re-fought hereafter, and perhaps under aggravated circumstances. Slavery re-established, and the same consequences essentially would follow again. * * * * *

"There is really no possible hopeful end to this conflict but the end of slavery. There is no such easy escape from our national troubles as some seem to imagine—no prospect of the war being short but by being useless, or else by being radical and determined, and, I may add, in regard to false principles, most unsparing. To purpose, therefore, that the Union shall survive and its glory and power be triumphantly restored and perpetuated, is virtually to doom slavery to speedy extinction. The preservation of the Union and the destruction of slavery are inseparable; aye, identical now; and he who votes for the one necessarily votes for the other. * * * * *

"I have not thought it necessary to show that, under existing circumstances, we are released from all legal or moral obligation to longer tolerate slavery in the land, if the safety of the nation demands its extinction. The case is too plain for doubt.

"The permission of slavery in the constitution, if such there be, as asserted and generally admitted, is only implied, and nowhere expressly declared. That instrument seems to have been made in anticipation of a better and more just time to come. The framers must have intended that when slavery should be done away the constitution should still remain; and that with this national progress and extermination of evil, the language of the constitution should become even now more appropriate, and this highest law of a nation where freedom and justice and equal rights are the inheritance of every man abide in its righteousness forever."

GOV. SPRAGUE professes to be a Democrat, and was nominated for Governor by a Democratic Convention. If such is his Democracy, God speed him. We would vote for him with all our heart. His Democracy is of the real, genuine stuff—not that sham Democracy which believes in the meanest of all aristocracies, which WENDELL PHILLIPS calls the aristocracy of skin. If our neighbor of the Post will embrace this Democracy, we will forgive all his past sins, and that is such a vast stretch of mercy, that it can have no doubt of our sincerity.

GOV. SPRAGUE says that "the preservation of the Union, and the destruction of slavery, are inseparable." This is a truth to which the whole nation will soon give credence. The sooner the better for the peace, the fame, and the pockets of the nation.

PORTER'S FLEET FOR NEW ORLEANS.—Our telegraphic dispatches state that Commodore Porter's splendid mortar fleet had sailed from Key West. Senator Grimes, of Iowa, having announced in a speech in the Senate that the destination of Commodore Porter's mortar fleet is New Orleans, we suppose it is not harmful to refer to the fact. It is extremely probable that when our troops take Memphis and proceed to New Orleans they will find the old flag flying there.

LET US REJOICE.—The nomination of the celebrated Dan. Sickles, for Brigadier General, has been rejected by the Senate unanimously. Even Cowan could not stomach Sickles. Let us rejoice there is so much virtue in Cowan. Sickles had better subside into that obscurity which a man covered with his crimes ought to seek, if he has a single redeeming trait left.

A BUTTER RATION.—Nearly every member of Congress, and five hundred and twenty-one field officers, have petitioned the Secretary of War to grant a butter ration to the soldiers. It is said that the ration will be granted. We fear the soldiers will not prize it much when they get it. Rancid butter will be no great treat, and fresh butter will be out of the question.

REBEL DOCUMENTS.—One of the Committee on the Conduct of the War has secured an immense package of valuable documents, which belonged to the rebel Generals Beauregard, Smith and Johnson. They contain information of much importance.

OUR NOBLE TYCOON.—An officer of high rank, who has just arrived at Washington from Kentucky, expressed the opinion that twenty thousand Federal troops could have held Fort Donelson against an army of a hundred thousand men.

ARTILLERY.—It is a singular fact that Dalghren opposes the proposition to construct several 20-inch Dalghren guns. The size he thinks too great, at least until the 15-inch guns have been thoroughly tried. There is a supply of the 15-inch at Fortress Monroe, and they have not yet been tested in a fight with the enemy. Dalghren very wisely advises the use of these guns before it is decided to construct a new lot of the 20-inch pattern.

RAILROAD MACHINERY FOR THE SOUTH.—Hon. C. Vibbard has, at the request of the government, purchased or leased from northern railroads thirty locomotives and several hundred passenger and freight cars for the use of the army in Virginia. The Central, although needing all its rolling stock for its own use, has patriotically contributed several locomotives and a number of freight cars for this purpose.—Albany Evening Journal, March 17.

More Extracts from Wendell Phillips' Great Speech.

We never read a speech more difficult to take extracts from than Wendell Phillips' great speech in Washington. Every part of it is worthy of extraction, and the difficulty is to know where to choose from such surpassing excellence. We are glad to find room for one or two more extracts:

THE WAR OF IDEAS.

And now, ladies and gentlemen, or rather, men and women, you who are responsible for the future, the question is, whether liberty or slavery shall rule this great continent, and South Carolina knows it. She has the statesmanship to know it. She said to Massachusetts in 1835, "abolish free speech; it is a nuisance." Well, it is to her. [Laughter and applause.] What she really meant was, that she could not live with free speech; and she can't. And the question to-day is, as to what extent she can trample free speech under her feet. The South is as sincere as we are in this struggle. Ten millions of people grapple twenty millions by the throat, and both literally, enthusiastically, and from the bottom of their hearts, believe they are fighting for an idea that holds the salvation of the world. I honor South Carolina for her sincerity. There is no doubt as to her believing what she says. It is a conspiracy to have her ideas govern the continent. Our fathers thought those ideas and our own could be molded together. They tried it, and I am willing, for one, that they should have the experiment of two generations—perfectly willing. They tried it under the Constitution, to see whether Massachusetts and South Carolina could live together. They united us in a bond of parchment. In other words, they put powder and fire into a cannon, screwed up at the muzzle and thought thus to assimilate the two. Mr. Webster died, supposing these ideas had been assimilated [laughter,] but the convulsion has come, and caused an explosion. We stand to-day among the pieces. And until this fortnight the Cabinet has said, and the Democratic party say, and the "weak-kneed" Republicans [laughter] re-echo the words, Put the pieces carefully back in their places. Put the same powder, the same fire inside. Say the Constitution backward, instead of your prayers, and there never will be another convulsion. Now, I don't believe it. [Laughter.] It is no caprice; this war didn't spring out of the ground. It is nobody's fault. Neither my fault, nor John C. Calhoun's to compare little folks to great ones. [Laughter.] It is nobody's fault. It is the inevitable result of the seeds which our fathers planted 70 years ago. I accept it. It is a struggle betwixt the slaveholders and the people. It begun 40 or 50 years ago. Every nation has faced it once in its life. England faced it when the cavalier and the puritan came in contact at Naseby. France faced it nearly 100 years ago, and it is not ended yet. We have begun it. This is its epoch of battle. The South comes up to the Southern bank of your Potomac, without either men, munitions or money—nothing but an idea; and the North goes up with men, munitions, money, and Major-Generals—the only thing she lacks is an idea. [Laughter and applause.] This contest is as I have said, one betwixt the slaveholders and the people. It never will cease. Yonder Congress may make what truces they please—the Democratic party may intrigue what compromises they please, but it never will cease any more than any other war of ideas ever did, until one or the other goes under.

DEMOCRACY NOT ON TRIAL.

I don't accept, in the fullness of its meaning, the taunt of the London Times, that Democracy is on trial. I know well, and pity the spleen from which it proceeded. I can well conceive how our mother country, boasting herself a strong Government the strength of Monarchy, with her flag floating to the breeze a thousand years, and looking across to the broken bubble of Democracy—I can well recognize, while running back a year or two and remembering how France started to utmost rivalry in the Crimean war, and this strong, compact Government put forth her utmost strength and pressed 72,000 soldiers into the fild; I say, I can well understand how it may feel a little spleenish, talk a little rash, when it looks across the water and sees the bursted bubble of democracy sending 700,000 volunteers. [Loud applause.]

But when the London Times says democracy is on trial, as a New Englander, born and raised in the Northern States, having never before set my foot on slave soil, I wish to God your Senate had hurried matters up. [Laughter and prolonged applause.]

The applause having subsided, the speaker paused a moment, and then remarked:

Now I have forgotten what I was going to say. [Laughter.]

Dr. Pierpont, in his usual good-humored manner, observed that he hoped those present would bear with the speaker, and he would soon recover, as he was rather unaccustomed to applause. [Renewed applause.]

Mr. Phillips—I don't know; I was burned in effigy within a fortnight. The speaker then resumed. I was saying that I did not believe that democracy was on trial. I believe that Massachusetts and the North is a democracy, pure and unalloyed. I believe that we will test them, whether it be by the acquisition of property or the preservation of it by the preservation of the right by the culture of morals or by the protection of liberty—that the democratic institutions of the North have proved themselves, after seventy years, a success. No King in Europe can stand up and say we have secured better than you have the ends of Government.

SEIZE YOUR OPPORTUNITY.

My text is, "Seize your opportunity." All nations grow up by seizing their opportunities. All statesmen are great, not by honesty, but by ability. I don't doubt the honesty of yonder Cabinet; they mean well—they mean very well. [Laughter.] All, I think, but especially the Secretary of War. [Loud applause.] And meaning well will save their souls up there, but it won't save the Union down here. [Laughter.] We want ability—a policy. I don't believe in subjugating South Carolina. If Major Gen. McClellan could plant the Stars and Stripes either at Charleston, Montgomery, or New Orleans to-night, the work is only begun. You have your "Elephant;" What are you going to do with him? [Laughter.]

This is no short work. There are two things you can do and two things you cannot do. You can't save Slavery, however much you try. You can destroy Slavery with a very little indifference; but you cannot save the Union without long years of trouble.

SAVE SOUTH CAROLINA BY CONVERTING HER.

I am not in favor of subjugating the South, I have no doubt that by the force of arms we can conquer her. If the North has any right to predominence in this Union it is because she has the ability to show, and ought to show, that she loves justice and civilization. Standing in this position, when you conquer the Carolinas you carry the seeds of conversion. Carolina can never be one with Massachusetts until you make her like Massachusetts. [Applause.] To save the Union don't conquer Carolina, convert her [Applause]; change her ideas; apply a policy, and let that policy be the education of the ignorant, the relief of the oppressed, instilling a love of the Union in the breasts of the deluded, and the emancipation of the slaves!

Suppose Abraham Lincoln to-day should conquer South Carolina, what has he gained? He has not uttered a word that the blacks can respond to. The poor whites hate him. The slaveholders hate him, of course. In fact, there is no one in South Carolina that does not hate him. Will anything be gained by conquering on the policy pursued at present? On the contrary, suppose the policy of emancipation should be adopted; the blacks will lift up their hands, thanking him from the bottom of their hearts, and render him all the assistance in their power. * * * *

So you see that my policy includes all the elements. I should put the state of conversion behind my cannon balls. In other words, I love Carolina. She has stood side by side with Massachusetts; she bore up our fathers in the dark hours of the revolutionary struggle. God bless her! [Applause.] I would use all the brain that New England schools have given me, in order to keep the pledge of my fathers of Massachusetts.

When the record of this Republic is written, I would have it say that in 1862, in our struggle, she kept the promise of her meekness. That she would do justice to the negro and to the white man of the South, giving to the one liberty, and to the other all the benefits of our republican institutions. Why should we not? Let us put Europe to shame.

And now at last is the golden hour on the clock of the century struck. Up, men of ideas! Up, children of the Puritans in the nineteen States! Seize the golden moment; hurl at the system the thunderbolt it has given you; proclaim justice to Carolina; bless her with liberty and prosperity. Have but one race from the Atlantic to the Pacific; one race forever, as indivisable as the granite that underlies the continent, to rule this magnificent inheritance, and have no nation in Europe that dare dictate to her how she shall fill her harbors.

ACQUIA CREEK.—The rebels had not on Friday evacuated their positions at either Acquia or Potomac creeks. Their batteries there, however, do not interfere at all with the navigation of the river. Their retreat being by the railroad through Fredericksburg to Richmond, they were not obliged to decamp at the same time as the army at Manassas. The appearances are, however, that they are moving their stores, &c., with a view to an early evacuation.

On Friday, the Yankee and Anacostia exchanged compliments, in the shape of shot and shell, with their batteries.

THE Department of General Fremont, say his enemies, is a conquered one. We wish it were so, indeed, and that no military necessity existed for its creation. Unless we are greatly mistaken there will be important battles fought in the Mountain Department before June.

We look for active campaigning and stirring scenes within the limits of the new department before the war is over, and we trust Fremont will silence the cavils of his implacable foes by the energy and activity which have been ever characteristic of the man.

THE Baltimore and Ohio Railroad is now open, and trains running from Wheeling as far as Martinsburg. The few miles of track between Martinsburg and Harper's Ferry remain to be put in repair. It is thought the entire road will be repaired and communication resumed with Baltimore by Saturday next.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

To Horse Owners.—Dr. Sweet's INFALLIBLE LINIMENT FOR HORSES is unrivalled by any; in all cases of Lameness, arising from Sprains, Bruises, or Wrenching, its effect is magical and certain. Harness or Saddle Galls, Scratches, Mange, &c., it will also cure speedily. Spavin and Ringbone may be easily prevented and cured in their incipient stages, but confirmed cases are beyond the possibility of a radical cure. No case of the kind, however, is so desperate or hopeless but it may be alleviated by this Liniment, and its faithful application will always remove the lameness and enable the horse to travel with comparative ease.

Every horse owner should have this remedy at hand, for its timely use at the first appearance of lameness will effectually prevent those formidable diseases mentioned, to which all horses are liable, and which render so many otherwise valuable horses nearly worthless.
