

The Eastern Yankees Won't Fight

So said the Southern after the battle of Fort Donelson. The Western Yankees will fight, said the Eastern Yankees will not. The victory of Gen. Burnside will produce a change of opinion, amounting to a conviction. With the exception of a regiment from Pennsylvania, the regiments which fought so gallantly at Newbern were from Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island. The forces of each side were nearly equal. The rebels were behind powerful intrenchments, armed with siege guns and mortars. They were fresh, well fed and well prepared. Our men had just come off their march, had marched some sixteen miles through mud and swamps, had bronchitis without the least abatement, and had subsisted on ration carried in their knapsacks. The rebels also in sight of their homes, they were fighting in spite of the fact that their wives, children, and sweethearts. They had every inducement that men can have to display heroism and to fight desperately. The Yankees made no effort, sustained solely by a deep sense of the justice of their cause and a confidence in the invincibility of a high state of civilization over one of a semi-barbarous character.

Army Movements.

We have endeavored in good faith to carry out the strictest order of the Secretary of War, in regard to the movement of troops. Our contemporaries have not been so careful, and we are compelled to submit to the mortification of their intrusions, leaving every thing behind them, and such was their haste, they failed to carry out their purpose of burning the city.

Senatorial Caucus in Ohio.

On Wednesday evening, the adjourned session of the Senate was held in Columbus, Ohio, and proceeded through the abortive forms of balloting, commencing at 7 o'clock, the former balloting having reached number 27, and, on standing number 28, again adjourned Thursday evening at 10 o'clock, when there was an equal number of yeas and nays, as many as 23 yeas and 23 nays, as many as 23 yeas and 23 nays, as many as 23 yeas and 23 nays.

Island No. 10.

It has surprised many that the rebels, after having given up Columbus without a blow, should all at once fall into another mood than the yielding one, which they had indulged so greatly to our advantage in attacking the stronghold, and make so determined a resistance as they now do, being doing at Island No. 10. But they will fight desperately at that point, if anywhere, for, as they suppose, the safety of Memphis, and in fact the command of the whole river, depend on this holding that important point. This is shown by the following, which we copy from a late number of the Memphis Appeal:

A True Democrat.

Hon. John Hickman, of Pennsylvania, who was the first Democrat in Congress to speak boldly against secession, and who, for so doing, was excommunicated from the fold of the modern pro-slavery Democracy, uttered the following memorable words during the discussion of the President's late message:

"According to my interpretation of the message the President looks to a contingency, in which extreme measures may be necessary, the abolition of slavery in the Gulf States, and I do not regard the message as offering a compensation for a disappointed hope, but an awful note of warning to the Southern States to make preparations accordingly. If this is not the plain interpretation of what the President means, then there is a most unfortunate use of language. The man who is not willing to save the Constitution and Union by the sacrifice of private interests and property, is already a rebel. I say not on whose side this declaration falls, but on whose side the Union lives. I say not in whose hands the Union lives, but in whose hands the Union lives. I say not in whose hands the Union lives, but in whose hands the Union lives."

The Allies and Mexico.

The following are the preliminaries agreed on between General Prim and Doblado, and the representatives of the Mexican Republic:

1. Since the Constitutional Government of Mexico has been restored, the Allies will not present any claims against the Mexican Republic, which it does not need, since the Mexican people, of strength and sympathy to preserve itself from whatever intestine revolt, the Allies to formalize the claims they have to prefer in the names of their respective nations.
2. Consequently and protesting as do the representatives of the allied nations, they attempt nothing against the independence, sovereignty and integrity of the Mexican Republic, and that they shall not be held responsible for the actions of their ministers or agents, and that they shall be held responsible for the actions of their ministers or agents, and that they shall be held responsible for the actions of their ministers or agents.

News from the Gulf.

By the arrival of the transport Fulton at New York, from Ship Island, we have some interesting items from the Gulf. A reconnaissance was made by our forces about two weeks ago, as far as Mississippi City, two companies were sent to reconnoiter in a steamer. This small force was attacked by about two thousand rebels, whose presence at this point had not been known to the Federal officers.
