Why is the Release of Col. Corcoran for some time past, and no satisfactory answer seems to be forthcoming. Indeed no answer whatever has been given by those who could speak by authority. Judging from the facts which are before the public, in reference to the release of prisoners, it seems probable that as a correspondent of the New York Evening Post remarks, the rebels have been playing their old Floyd game of cheating in the exchange of prisoners. The correspondent goes on

When the twenty-five hundred rebel prisoners upon Bosnoke Island were released by General Burnside on parole, it was upon the distinct understanding entered into between General Wool and General Howell Cobb, that the Federal prisoners remaining at the South, including Cols. Corcoran and Wilcox, should be immediately sent forward to Norfolk to complete the archappe. There are not enough Fed. ately sent forward to Norfolk to complete the axchange. There are not enough Federal prisoners at the South to make good the number of rebels captured on Roanoke Island, but General Wool was willing to let the account go unsettled. He has been tricked, however. Four weeks have passed away, and neither Colonel Corcoran or Colonel Wilcox make their appearance off Fortress Monroe, nor one of the rank and file due according to the arrangement. file due according to the arrangement. It is considered highly probable that the rebels mean to shirk from their part of the agreement now that they have got back their troops captured by Burnside.
