Pittsburgh Gazette.

THURSDAY MORNING, MARCH 27.

Apologizing for Mobs.

We were never more surprised than when we read the following extract, in so respectable a paper as the New York Commercial Advertiser, in reference to the treatment Wendell Phillips experienced at the hands of a mob in Cincinnati:

Suppose Mr. Vallandigham or Mr. Voorhees should plumply say in a loyal city like Cincinnati!—the blood of whose sons has flowed like water in this war against disunion, that they were open advocates of disunion—would not the people be justified in vindicating their loyalty at once, and in punishing the traitors? Would those who now lament Mr. Phillips' pitiable slight, shed tears for V. and V. aforesaid? We think not. But where is the line to be drawn? May an abolitionist insult the memory of our fathers, and bring our Union into disrepute with his blasphemous raving, and still go unchecked and unimprisoned? Is there no lettre de cachet or order of arrest for this class of traitors? There would be reason and justice if these itinerant brawlers were made to keep company with some of our state prisoners. But least of all should we hope or wish to see sympathy for the fate of any man who proclaims in the midst of a national calamity his identification with the mad spirit that has loaded the nation with debt and dug thousands of graves along the border line of North and South.

In the first place, if the Commercial was possessed of moderate intelligence of passing events, it would have known that Mr. Phillips did not avow himself a disunionist, whatever the telegraph might say, because he has repeatedly, in New York, in Washington, and in Pittsburgh, declared positively to the contrary; and that he was for the Union, and for the whole Union.

In the second place, the most moderate discernment would have shown the editor that the mobbing did not arise from anything said on the occasion, but was a preconcerted outrage on the rights of free speech. Decent people do not carry rotten eggs, in their pockets, and orderly citizens do not visit crowded assemblies armed with stones, bowie-knives and revolvers.

In the third place, Wendell Phillips did not obtrude himself upon the people of Cincinnati; but was there by invitation to lecture in behalf of the Sanitary Committee, and as his opinions were well known on the subject of slavery, nobody was compelled to hear him but those who chose to do so, and the mobbing was quite as great an outrage upon the fifteen hundred orderly citizens who went to hear, and heard with approbation, as upon Wendell Phillips himself.

In the fourth place, it is gross injustice—there is nothing in Mr. Phillips' antecedents to excuse it—for the editor to identify him "with the mad spirit that has loaded the nation with debt," etc., unless the Commercial means to join the New York Herald and the Express, in laying the blame of this war upon the Abolitionists.

A more patriotic, and a stronger Union speech, has not been delivered than Mr. Phillips delivered in Pittsburgh, and the same is said of his remarks in Cincinnati by the editors there. True, he goes to his object by a different road than that pursued by some Unionists, but he is quite as sincere, and we have no doubt the result will show he is quite as prudent and as wise as they.

The spirit of the whole extract is wrong. It is an apology for mob law to put down the right of free speech. When this jewel of our Constitution is gone there is nothing left of liberty worth the name. If slavery is too sacred to be assailed by argument, or sarcasm, or even vituperation, if any one chooses to indulge in it, it is high time we looked to our land-marks, and see whither we are drifting, especially as slavery is now assailing the life of the nation, and can justly be charged with having "loaded the nation with debt, and with having dug the thousands of graves along the border."

A little over a year ago, Mr. Yancey made a speech in Cincinnati, in the same opera house, in which he threatened disunion, if Lincoln was elected, and which threat he has since carried into execution. The same vile rabble which mobbed Mr. Phillips heard him patiently. Suppose they had mobbed him, would the New York editor have approved of it, or does he think abolitionists only ought to be mobbed. If mobbing is to be the rule, a few reckless individuals would disturb any assembly, and even visit upon the editor himself the punishment he seems to justify in the case of Mr. Phillips.

FREMONT AND HUNTER.—The New York Evening Post says that Major-General Fremont and Hunter, with their families, have been at the Astor House during the last ten days. Fremont is here arranging his private affairs, and Hunter only awaits the sailing of the steamer for Port Royal. Both Generals have important tasks set before them, and will not delay their departure a single unnecessary hour. Fremont is looking vigorous and hearty, and is eager to be in the saddle once more. Hunter is prepared to push forward the columns at Port Royal as rapidly as they can be moved.

LIEUTENANT WORDEN, the gallant commander of the Monitor, is still very ill. A letter from one of his friends, dated at Washington, Monday, says: "Erysipelas has broken out, and for two or three days we feared for his life. He is rallying a little now, and with my wife and his wife, and three surgeons, we hope to bring him round, though he will be awfully scarred. But he will have the consolation of knowing that he is the first man who ever had a score of ten-inch shells burst within ten inches of his head and live to tell of it."

THE Republican Central Committee of Michigan has issued an address to the people, in which the following passage occurs:

"Cordially welcoming patriotic citizens of all parties, co-operating with them in all proper ways to sustain the government—state and national; beware of old effete and corrupt organizations controlled by treasonable, or even doubtful influences. Rubble crisis he will best sustain the country, who bears aloft the Republican banner."

THE NASHVILLE.—The announcement of the capture of the Nashville is received with gratification in New York, from the fact that one-half of the vessel is owned by Messrs. Spofford, Tileston & Co. The other half was owned by parties in Charleston, South Carolina, but under the Confiscation Act their share can be bought in under a sale of the federal government, and at a reasonable rate.

Freedom National.

Mr. Arnold, of Illinois, introduced the following bill on Monday, into the House. It was referred to the Committee on Territories:

A bill to render Freedom national and Slavery sectional.

To the end that Freedom may be and remain forever the fundamental law of the land, in all places whatever, so far as it lies within the powers or depends upon the action of the Government of the United States to make it so; therefore,

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress Assembled:

SECTION 1. That Slavery and involuntary servitude, in all cases whatsoever, other than in the punishment of crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall hereafter cease and be prohibited forever in all the following places, viz:

First: In all the Territories new existing or hereafter to be formed or acquired in any way.

Second: In all places purchased or to be purchased by the United States, with the assent of the Legislature of the several States, for the erection of forts, magazines, arsenals, dockyards, and other needful buildings.

Third: In all vessels on the high seas and on the national highways, beyond the territory and jurisdiction of the several States from which or to which the said vessels may be going.

Fourth: In all places whatsoever where the National Government is supreme or has exclusive jurisdiction and power.

SEC. 2. That every person now held, or attempted to be held hereafter, as a slave in any of the places above named, is hereby declared to be free, and the right to freedom hereby declared may be asserted in any of the Courts of the United States, or of the several States, in behalf of the party, or his or her posterity, after any lapse of time, upon the principle that a party once free is always free.

In noticing this important bill, the New York Evening Post, most cogently and properly observes:

Mr. Arnold's bill will, we trust, speedily be reported by the Committee on Territories, to which it was referred, and brought to a vote. It is a clear assertion of the principles on which our government, was founded, and it proposes to carry out those principles in a manner entirely constitutional and eminently wise. It has another good quality, in that it defines sharply the position of this nation towards the rebels. The corner-stone of the "Southern Confederacy," according to Mr. Stephens, is slavery—the corner-stone of our national government is freedom. There slavery is the rule, here freedom is the rule.

So carefully does the bill guard the rights and privileges of the States that, in the third paragraph of section first, slavery is prohibited in all vessels on the high seas and on the national highways, beyond the territory and jurisdiction of the several States from which or to which the said vessels may be going. There is here no undue assumption of power, no trenching on disputed ground. The more ardent opponents of emancipation measures are such confessedly on the ground that slavery is a local State institution, with which, where it exists in a State, the national Government has no right to interfere.

We hope, therefore, to see a gathering of the true men of all parties in favor of this bill. All friends of liberty can here meet on constitutional ground, and place the Government where the founders of the Union meant it to stand, and where it stood while Washington, Jefferson, Madison and other distinguished Virginians were at the helm. Moreover, it places us squarely opposite to the enemies of the Union. They rebel to make slavery national; we fight to preserve the Union as it is, with freedom national. They strive to overthrow the constitution because it does not make slavery universal; we fight to maintain it, and with it the principles of liberty for which the fathers fought, and which they made the corner-stone of their constitution.

From Dixie's Land.

We give below the rebel account of the battle of Pea Ridge, from the Memphis Appeal. It will be seen that the rebels admit the death of Generals McCullough, McIntosh and Herbert, and that Gen. Slack was mortally wounded, making four generals lost in the fight:

Fort Smith, March 9th, 1862.—Our troops, under Generals Van Dorn, Price and McCullough, engaged the enemy for three days, the 5th, 6th and 7th, at Perry's Ridge, in Benton county, this State, near the Missouri line.

The fighting was the most desperate on record. Our loss was immense, that of the enemy unknown. Generals McCullough and McIntosh were both killed on the 7th inst. Gen. Slack was mortally wounded. General Price was slightly wounded in the arm. Col. McCrea reported killed. Col. Sims slightly wounded in the arm.

Our forces are now in the rear of the enemy, and driving them southward. They are whipped beyond a doubt ere this. We are expecting later intelligence every moment.

Gen. McCullough fell while leading his command to a charge. The bodies of Generals McIntosh and McCullough will arrive this evening.

Fort Smith, March 11th.—Capt. Hickory Rogers arrived here yesterday in charge of the ammunition wagons. He brings with him official and some very interesting details of the battle between our forces and the enemy at Elkhorn, four miles from the Missouri line.

Captain Rogers says the fighting was terrible. A larger portion of our troops being armed with the common hunting rifles and shot guns, charged the enemy time and again, clubbing their guns and driving the enemy, who were armed with the best of guns, from their first position. The enemy gained a much stronger position, when, from the exhausted state of our troops, they fell back.

When it became known to the troops that Gen. McCullough was killed, they were frantic with rage, and his command fought like demons, charging at times, and putting to flight five times their number.

Gen. McIntosh fell at the head of his command, early in the action; also Gen. Herbert. Gen. Price received a flesh wound in the arm the first day of the fight. Gen. Slack, of the Missouri army, received a mortal wound.

There were a great many officers of lower grades killed and wounded, and it will be several days yet before an exact list of the killed and wounded can be got at.

Our loss in wound numbers is estimated at two thousand, killed and wounded.

A letter from Florence, Alabama, to the Charleston Mercury, denies that there is any Union sentiment there. It says:

As concerns the account of the joy of the people of Florence on the visit of the gunboats, and upon seeing the old rag, the stars and stripes, it is a point-blank, jet-black, abolition lie. Not a lady of Florence went to see them, or desired to go, or had any communication with them. They were held in utter detestation by every soul except one man and his wife; a tailor from Vermont, named Hyde, who had been living here for many years. They went down to see them, and were glad, but nobody else.

He says they have the Vermonter in jail on a charge of stealing.

HERE is a crinoline story reported by an African traveller:

"A wealthy Arab, residing near the frontiers of Morocco, lately paid his first visit to Algiers, and was present at a ball. On his return home he said to his wives:—'What strange creatures these French women are! Would you believe it? they absolutely carry an open umbrella under their petticoats!' Such was the idea formed of crinoline by this son of Mahomet."

Slave Murder.

A Baltimore correspondent of the New York Evening Post says:

The case of the slave killed by his master in Charles county, recently ventilated in the newspapers, is substantially admitted by one of the slaveholder's neighbors in the Baltimore American. The attempt to escape from the charge by pretending that the death of the slave did not result from the punishment indicted is regarded by everybody in a slave State as confession. This is only one of many similar cases constantly occurring in the domains of slavery. And yet this is the system of oppression that Northern apologists for slavery would see restored to its former status in the Union, which it has taken up arms to slay and destroy. Out upon all such miserable sympathy for iniquity! If they stood in the shoes of poor Jack, how changed would be their tune!

DEVASTATION NEAR LEESBURG.—The rich and thriving farming lands about and near Leesburg have been devastated by the rebels, and they look more like a waste that an inhabited region. The small farmers have suffered most severely. Mr. Thomas Swann's estate, about a mile from Leesburg, is stripped of all its fences, and its outhouses almost destroyed—though the mansion was not disturbed; a very costly edifice. Just before the rebels left they burned some 4,000 bushels of wheat in the stacks, belonging to Mr. Swann, who was the late Mayor of Baltimore, and resides there. He estimates his losses and injuries at some $20,000. This is only one case in a hundred. The people who are left behind express themselves as disgusted with secession, but they leave it to northern soldiers to put it down. They are still under the poisoning influence of slavery, and dread the crack of the slaveholder's whip.

SECESSION IN PHILADELPHIA.—The Rev. Mr. Cracraft, of the Church of the Epiphany, Philadelphia, formerly occupied by the late lamented Dr. Tyng, has been forced to resign on account of his strong Union principles. In his farewell sermon he stated that he was literally starved out of the Church, as his salary was purposely withheld from him, and he was bombarded by anonymous letters from his secession Church members, requesting him to resign.

Secession is by no means confined to the South. There are rebels in every part of the country, who deserve the offices of the hangman quite as richly as Jeff. Davis.
