as will be seen by the following extract : "The Senate has been engaged for several days past in debating the bill for the abolition of slavery in the District of Columbia. There seems to be no question of the purisdiction of Congress over the District, and from present indications it appears probable that the bill will pass both the Sanate and the House.

It is a pretty sure sign that a bill is going to pass when the Herald acquiesces. The Herald wants the question left to the people of the District, where it expects the measure will be rejected; as if the people resident there had any right to keep up an institution objectionable to the great majority of the nation which sustains the city:
