The constitutional power of Congress to make roads or improve rivers, merely for the road is urged as an important war measure, but it is argued on the other side, that by no possibility can it be completed in time to be used in quelling the present rebellion.

A Street of Woniters.

In the first place, the war may last longer than our wishes lead us to anticipate. The same prudence which justifies the construction of armories and foundries, the build- ment with the builders of the Monitor ing of numerous iron-clad steamers, the contracts for 15-and 20-inch columbiads, may properly lead to making more perfect the communications between the capital practicable rapidity. Important improveand the interior of the country.

capital could hardly be retained, unless we forty feet longer than the Monitor, with have other facilities for reaching it than proportionate breadth of beam, and other those now in existence. The traitors of qualifications for a heavier armament than Baltimore would seize the first opportunity that of the "illustrious predecessor." The afforded, by foreign aggression, to repeat the opening scenes of the rebellion, and cut is one of the points of difference from the off the only route by which it can now be Monitor which will probably be most strikreached. The first act of the enemy would | ingly felt by the enemy. be to send an iron fleet up the Chesapeake to strengthen and uphold their parricidal arms. The argument is used to show the necessity of another railroad line from Washington to the East and Northward.

If it is of force in that connection, it is of equal or greater force in the one we advo-

urged by Washington as important to success in the war against that power, and he chose the identical route now proposed. If the United States was at war with Great | was a time when he would not vote to abol-Britain, the main operations of our armies ish Slavery in the District of Columbia. We will be on the Lakes and at tide water, of the war was to restore the Constitution, of the war was to restore the Constitution, and the importance of this communication between them would be as great now as it was then. It is true, there are other routes opened which did not exist in Washington's day,—but the power of the enemy we would have to contend with—the magnitude of the given might be the contend with—the magnitude of the given ment from conhection with Slavery. It did not follow that the Republican party might indirectly affect Slavery. The obday,—but the power of the enemy we would

The Government, in the year past, would have saved, in transportation and property, more than enough to pay for two such roads, and that black heading of the darkest page in the year's history. Bell with the such paralleled resources; but look at the difference! What can be the reason, except that Virginia has an institution which leading of the darkest page in the year's history. Either the Government or the city must be removed. The construction of this railroad, and of another route to New York, would be, in effect, a removal, at a comparatively small expense. The Pittsburgh Cumberland and Washington road would at once place the latter city bodily sixty-seven miles nearer the shore Potomac. The northern element, which has already infused new business activity into the bright heaven above them, filled with the life-giving breath of the Almighty."

Manufacturers of IBON BALLING, IBON VAULTS AND WALLING, IBON VAULTS AND WALLIN the capital, should be fostered. If the proposed communications are constructed, northern energy and capital will concentrate there on a larger scale, and in due time much of the commerce which has heretofore filled the coffers of the importers of writing from Baltimore, says: Washington and Alexandria. There is no good reason why the latter city should not become worthy of its pretentious name. But Eastern Virginia and Western Maryland cannot safely and certainly be made as the count for the solution of the question why the free blacks increase so rapidly in Maryland, in the fuce of the discouragements to emancipation. I saw at once, in looking at the subject from the usual standpoints, that I could not satisfactorily account for the phenomenon.

Comberland will require 2,000,000 of dollars. As the company proposes to reimburse in mails and freight, the Government : Southernbarbarities, which have lately come will get it back again. A war with a foreign to light, most truly says: power would settle the account in a few And this is the sort of civilization that power would settle the account in a few months. The advalfages to the country in such a contingency from having the road, cannot be estimated in money. An objection is urged against granting Government aid to this project, on the ground that it will open the way to a hundred other similar demands. There can be no similarly accessors.
