Mf. M'Creery announced that he was authorized to state that Drs. John and Themas Dickson had tendered their services as 'unrageons, and would leave at any moment. Applance.

Mr. Park moved that the report be adopted, and the plan of the Committee approved. He thought that, aside from the dispatch of Mr. Stateon, Pittsburgh had a right to take and nurse a proportion of the wounded, and thus bear a share of the labor and expense.

Mr. J. M. Cooper opposed the adoption of the report, under the chromataness. We had better save our energies. The highest authority had informed us that our tender was not necessary at present, and as other battles are yet to be fought, we might at a future time and a more favorable opportunity for extending aid in that direction.

After some further discussion, the names of those who intended to volunteer as surgeons and nurses were called for by the President, when the following responded either person ally or by proxy:

Coverage, April 16—The correspondent of the first country of the c

In the face of this combination of circumstances, the rebals fell that their enterprises for the day was a failure, and as night was advantageous position somewhat in the reary yet occupying the main road to Corinth. The gunboate continued to send their shell after watching of several hours of intense anxiety, the advance regiments of Gen. Buell's army appeared on the opposite bank of the river, and the work of passing the river began—the 36th Indiana and 68th Uhio being the first to cross, followed by the main portion of Nolson's and Bruce's divisions. Cheer after other greeted their arrival, and they were immediately sent to the advance, where they rested on their arms for the night. All night long steamers were engaged in ferrying Buell's forces across, and when daylight broke, it was evident the rebols, too, had been strongly relldored.

The battle was oponed by the rebelsat seven o'clock from the Corinth road, and in half an hour they extended along the whole line. At nine o'clock the sound of artillery and musketry fully equalled that of the previous day.

The enemy was met by the reinforcements, and the still westried soldiers of yesterday, with an energy that certainly could not have been expected. It became evidest they were avoiding the extreme of our left wing, and enheavoring, with perseverance and determination, to find some week point by which to turn our force. They left one point, but to return to it immediately, and thee as suddenly they would, by some masterly stroke of general-ship, sireed a most vigoross attack upon some critical and they would on whore they fancied they would not where they fancied they would be some regiments had not a prevent of the capture of the original standards and the attimute of the previous day and the result of the original standards and the attimute of the previous day steady as clock work, and it soon became evident the enemy considered the task they had undertaken a hopeless one.

Further reinforcements now began to arrive, and took position on the right of our mais centre, under Waliace.

Gond. Prentiss displayed conspicuous bravery during the first part of the engagement, and before he was taken prisoner. He had just men against a superior force of the enemy He was repulsed and received a musket ball in the arm, at the same time his horse was killed. Before he could extricate himself the enemy were upon him.
