FRIDAY MORNING, APRIL 18.

Disloyalty in Nashville.

We have conversed with several gentlemen who have visited Nashville since its occupation by Federal troops, and they all unite in asserting that Nashville is a disloyal city. Very little influential Union feeling is found there. The people are sullen, refuse to do business, and secession sympathies are openly avowed. If our army was removed, or if it met with any severe reverse, Nashville would again rise in rebellion.

These facts are confirmed by every letter from that quarter. Even conspiracies are feared. A letter to the Cincinnati Gazette, dated Nashville, April 14, says:

A CONSPIRACY.

Late Saturday evening, one James T. Bell, a little Scotchman, who was the local editor and one of the proprietors of the Nashville Daily Gazette, was arrested in this city, and conveyed by the Provost Guard to the penitentiary, for seditious language and probable connection with midnight conspiracy. The fact which led to his arrest was, that he approached a man whose sentiments he had misapprehended, and informed him confidentially that, at midnight Saturday, the city bells would be rung as a signal, and the last Union man "cleaned out." He is one of the City Council who refused to take the oath of allegiance, by the advice of W. F. Cooper, Esq. Though the man is light material, and would hardly be entrusted with the deep secrets of a serious conspiracy, the Provost Marshal did well in putting out an extra guard, and patrolling the streets with cavalry and infantry all night. Men were not permitted on any pretext, to assemble in groups on the streets. It is not impossible, there was more import in Bell's language than persons who know him are willing to believe. Straws may show the current of the wind. Certainly, if the Secessionists of Nashville had not entered into the atrocious conspiracy he divulged, it was only for lack of courage, and not because they have not the will. But if the conspiracy had been one to pick the pockets of all the Union men in the city and commit violence on the corpses of the Federal soldiers in the cemetery, I should regard it with more credulity. Let no one misunderstand me. Undoubtedly they would assassinate loyal people; but it is hard to believe they would ring bells for a signal. The noise might awake their intended victims. The thieves had not even the courage to look honest men in the face on the street, but bore gimlet holes in the pavement with their bang-dog eyes.

An insurrection of traitors in Nashville would have a most healthful influence. It would bring on some of that just severity, for want of which our political atmosphere is breeding pestilence.

I committed an error in one of my former letters when I stated that General Washington Barrow was enlarged on parole. He was seen on the streets in a carriage; but I suppose there must have been a guard in attendance. The correction is made with no ordinary degree of pleasure. I am not without hope the sleeping lion of the law will yet awake.

On inquiry I learn James Bell was charged with printing a false report of the battle of Pittsburgh, for the purpose of encouraging seditious feeling, and secretly circulating it. One James, a writer of the Banner, who claims to have been in former days connected with the New York Spirit of the Times, was also arrested, on suspicion of connection with the same matter, and lodged with Bell in the penitentiary.

The Slave Trade.

The Committee on Foreign Relations, to which had been referred the treaty between Great Britain and the United States for the suppression of the slave trade, reported it back with amendment, and with the favorable indorsement of the Committee. It is the opinion that this treaty will receive the prompt sanction of the full Senate, and be forthwith forwarded to England, to be ratified by that Government.

It is supposed that this treaty has been made with the object of facilitating the suppression of the slave trade. Heretofore our treaties on the subject, owing to the jealousy of slaveholders in the Cabinet and Senate, have not been of the character best calculated for the object intended. We trust now that this nefarious traffic will be ended forever.

Nominations Confirmed.

The Senate, in Executive Session, on Tuesday, confirmed Gov. E. D. Morgan as Major-General, and the following gentlemen as Brigadier-Generals: Geo. L. Hartsuff, Carl Schurs, Rufus Saxton, Chas. Devens, Benjamin Alvord, N. B. Buford, Nathan Kimball, J. Van Allen, and Wm. S. Smith.

Amos Perry was confirmed as Consul to Tunis.

Mahlon Wilkinson was nominated and confirmed to-day, as Receiver of Public Moneys at Vermillion, in Dacotah Territory.

The Senate, in Executive Session, also received from the President two Indian treaties and the nominations of Col. Jeff. C. Davis, of Indiana, and Col. Carr, as Brigadier-Generals. Both officers distinguished themselves at the battle of Fea Ridge.

Nominated as Major General.—The President was so much delighted at the achievement of the great astronomical General, O. M. Mitchell, in making forced marches upon Huntsville, Decatur and Stephenson, on the Memphis, Charleston and Richmond line of railroad, and seizing one hundred miles of that road, capturing rebels, locomotives and rolling stock, that he has, on the recommendation of Secretary Stanton, promoted him to be a Major General. Gen. Mitchell's recent movement is viewed as one of the most important of the war.

The Wounded at Pittsburgh Landing.—A dispatch from Pittsburgh Landing, dated Cairo, Tuesday, the 15th, says:

Gen. Strong has received the following dispatch, dated Pittsburgh:

"Sick and wounded all off.

"Stop all Sanitary Commissioners, nurses and citizens. We don't need any more.

(Signed) H. W. Halleck, Maj. Gen."

We presume our boats had reached there by that time.

General Wallace.—The last sad rites and offices of affection and respect for the late gallant and heroic Gen. H. L. Wallace, were performed in Ottawa, Illinois, on Tuesday last. The whole community turned out in solemn and sad respect for the loved neighbor and gallant officer, who laid down his life on the field of battle for his beloved country.

Secretary Chase and Minister Cameron.—Secretary Chase returned on Tuesday from a visit to Minister Cameron, who will sail for St. Petersburg in the steamer of May 7. The Herald's story that Russia has objected to Mr. Cameron's appointment, is a pure fabrication.

The News from Nashville.

The news from Nashville is not encouraging. Our special correspondent, who, from his long residence in Kentucky and Tennessee, is well qualified to form an opinion, says that there are few loyal men in the Western and Central parts of the latter State. Those who resisted secession the longest, and who sacrificed the most for their Union principles, are now our fiercest enemies, declaring daily that when our now victorious forces are hastening back through Nashville, after the defeat which the rebels say is impending, they will fire upon them from their houses, and in whatever way they can, urge on the work of extermination. He says that the withdrawal of the troops would be the signal for another insurrection, and that the towns to be held must be garrisoned by our loyal men. This does not accord with what Parson Brownlow preaches and what Governor Johnson hopes, but it is in strict accordance with the results of hundreds of observations that Northern men have made.

We have no doubt that our informant reflects what he believes, and that his opinions are in the main correct. And how much soever we may wish to pin our faith to the two Union men whom we have named, we are compelled to judge of Tennessee not so much by what they say, as by the analogies which the triumphs of our arms elsewhere have developed. It is a rule that slavery and loyalty do not go together; that wherever the former is strong, the latter is weak and powerless or wholly wanting. Tennessee, in the neighborhood of Nashville, is no exception to what is elsewhere true. The well-founded fear of what has happened may have deterred farming men from embarking in what they foresaw would be a failure; hence the progress of secession was slow. The virus was there, however. Nashville divided with Memphis the doubtful honor of being the centre of the slaveholding aristocracy of the State.

What then, is to be done? From the beginning we have had but one opinion. The cause of the war must be struck. Slavery must go down! At least, the slaves of the rebels, the objects for which they prolong the strife, the precious treasures which give such a venom and fury to disloyal endeavor, must be set free! We care not how, whether by proclamation of the President, or by a confiscation law comprehensive in its terms and energetic in its operation. Not only at Nashville, but in all other places in all the rebel Border States, the work of liberation must commence and be faithfully carried on—must commence while yet the country has the financial strength to carry out the policy that necessity will by and by compel it to inaugurate. Hesitation is criminal because it is dangerous, imperilling the unity if not the very life of the Republic. Sharpen the axe and let it fall! Slavery is loathsome and contaminating. Freedom or it must die; and before the end of this campaign, the people will be compelled to choose one of the two to doom to death. We know which will be destroyed!—Chicago Tribune.

Another Rebel Stand on the River.

A letter from Cairo, dated April 14th, to the Cincinnati Gazette, says:

FORT PILLOW.

I have just been placed in possession of some valuable information relative to matters below. Two deserters from the rebel army arrived at New Madrid a day or two ago, and report that another stand will be made by the insurgents at Fort Pillow, sixty miles above Memphis. Fort Randolph, twelve miles below Fort Pillow, where the rebels once thought of making a stand in case they were repulsed at the latter place, has been virtually abandoned. It is said by these deserters—and our spies substantially confirm all they report—that there are about 3,000 men at Fort Pillow. Only twenty guns are mounted on the fort, most of them old columbiads. [This is doubtless an error.] There are also several water batteries, extending for half a mile above the fort, and two midway up the bluff. The works on the summit are prepared with the same engineering skill that characterized those at Belmont, Donelson, Columbus and Island No. 10. But since all these have fallen into our hands, who can doubt the result of Fort Pillow.

A NEW REBEL GENERAL.

The rebels at Fort Pillow are commanded by General Villipigue, a man unknown to fame, but said to be a very accomplished officer, and one in whom they have great confidence. He is a Creole gentleman, and although untried, is believed to be a second Beauregard. Nous verrons.

PREPARATIONS FOR A FORWARD MOVEMENT.

There can be no impropriety, I think, in my stating that a large fleet of transports left St. Louis last night for New Madrid. With these General Pope proposes to move his army down the river, in company with the gunboats; and then, if the rebels will only stand, we may soon expect to have three thousand prisoners more, and the last serious impediment in our way to Memphis and New Orleans will be removed. I am inclined to the belief that the resistance to our progress at Fort Pillow will be feeble. The movement upon the fort, I learn from a semi-official source, is to be made immediately. I leave to join the fleet the first opportunity.

East Tennessee.

A letter from Nashville, of the 14th inst., says:

History will give East Tennessee a martyr's crown. The rebellion has poured upon her head the dregs of its poisonous cauldron. While other sections have been delivered, and have trampled the jewel of deliverance under their feet like swine, devoted, enduring East Tennessee suffers, and, like Israel in captivity, is well nigh ready to despair under the oppressor's hand. It would seem that when this Government loveth it sufereth to be chastened, for it must love East Tennessee.

I conversed with an intelligent young gentleman who left Knoxville just one week prior to last Friday. While he breathes the deepest and most uncompromising hostility to the enemies of the nation, every word, look, and gesture is full of the crushing despondency which lies like an incubus on the bosom of his neglected section. To him the impudence and license of rebels, who go about the streets of Nashville, are incomprehensible. Between twenty-five and thirty loyal men left their homes in company with him, but only about thirteen continued till they got without the rebel lines. The others became alarmed, lost their intention to escape should be suspected, and bring upon them aggravated oppression. Impressment is const
