[From the New Orleans Delta—no date given.]
The city was somewhat excited yesterday with rumors of fighting at Forts Jackson and St. Philip. We have ascertained that seven or eight of the enemy's fleet approached tantalisingly near the forts, and were fired upon from some of our guns, when they hastily retired. Of course this, and a similar approach on a previous occasion, were not designed for a serious attack. Their object was doubtless to reconnolire the fortr and test our metal.

One Faith—one Baptism.—A writer in the Christian Chronicle (Philadelphia,) speaking of the arrival of a considerable number of "contrabands" at the Union salon, at the foot of Washington street, in that city, relates the following interesting.

"Emphatic," not Profane. "Simphatic," not Profune.

There is a good story going the rounds at Fortrest Monres concerning a certain general, who is piour anough to cook, but on certain occasions, when his eldander though cond on this justice to his feetings by "giving them, can do find justice to his feetings by "giving them, can do his justice; came town, the general was all in an other law as highly exclied, and now and the he could be heard him, for the general was all the he could be search him, gives a very good description of how the white-him; est man moved about in the midat of the storm of shells.
