up in the Democratic party fold, but, not liking its course in 1800 upon the slavery question, left it and went over to the Know Nothings. He found just as little comfort in his new associations as in his old ones; and which Douglas, in his non-intervenand which Douglas, in his non-intervention doctrines, arose above the horizon, he went after his new rising sun. But he was not happy in his, new relations. The war came, and his unhappiness grow apace; but when Mr. Lincoln signed the District of Columbia abolition bill his wretchedness was at its height. Nothing could console him. His heart was against slavery in all its forms, and yet he had been led to believe that the emancipation of the slaves man here was the President actually signing a bill for that very purpose. He gave up all business, and wrestled for more than a day mith his prejudices, and at last came off bid the victor by embracing Republicanism, and from that moment he has been as happy as he has before been unhappy. He says now that no man's patriotism and loyalty are to be trusted who is not a Republican. He is now hard at work preaching the good tidings of Repulican freedom in the western part of the State.

OPINION OF A SLAVEHOLDER. A slaveholder of Prince George county, in this State, who has some forty slaves, expresses himself in favor of the immediate abolition of slavery throughout the whole country since the signature of the District Abolition act by the President. He says this measure is the death-blow to slavery in all the slave States, and he is persuaded if Congress will pass a law at once providing for compensation to loyal slaveholders, upon the principle of the District act, that every slave State will speedily accept it every slave State will speedily accept it and abolish slavery.

MR, LEARY. Mr. Leary, the representative from the-Third District of our State, comprising the eight eastern wards of Baltimore and adeight-eastern wards of Baltimore and adjoining portions of Baltimore county, is one of Albert S. White's Emancipation Committee. His origin and antecedents are all on the side of free labor against stave labor, for he came up from the working ranka, and he has it now in his power to make a name for himself that will stand alongside of Wilberforce's. He is a timid. man naturally, but the cause of freedom ought to nerve his heart and arm for strik-ing a blow in behalf of the down-trodden slave; and I think it will.

One of the recently intercepted letters from Jeffdom says that the writer was at church the previous Sunday, and saw Jeff.
Davis there. She says that he had a shock-church the previous Sunday, and saw Jeff.

Davis there. She says that he had a shocking bad hat on, and looked in wretched health; his face being more like a corpse's than a living organism.

A' Good Story by the President.

Wendell Phillips has got home to Boston, and has made a speech there, telling his neighbors what he heard and saw during his late trip. He tells the following characteristic and good story of the President:

But yet I do not think the act abolishing alavery in the District, broad and marked of the manifestations of the opinion of the popule. He holds out his hands to the millions and says, "Support me!" We have not yet answered him officially. That message of his is the boldest voice yet heard over the continent. It means more heard over the continent. It means more than men accord to it. May I tell you a story?—he always tells one. [Laughter.] Noticing some criticisms upon his message, he said, "There is more in it than people see. Did you ever hear of the story of the Irishman who went down to the State of Maine, in Maine Liquor-Law times, and saked for a glass of soda water, adding, "Couldn't you put a drop of the crather in it unbeknown to meanight."

Mr. Phillips comments on the anecdote

as follows: as follows:

That Message says this, substantially That Message says this, substantially "Gentlemen, now is your time to sell. If you don't seize it, and another twelve months sweeps what you call property from your grasp, without compensation, never say I did not give you fair notice." [Applause.] That is one half the Message the other half is an arrow's flight beyond even that, for it says this: "Gentlemen, if you will sell, I will buy." That means that rebellion has given him the right to buy, and he goes on to say: "If the abolition of slavery be an efficient means of ending this war, if I find cannon unsuccessful, I shall try efficient means." In other words: "Gentlemen, I will buy if you will trade. If you won't trade, remember that I have If you won't trade, remember that I have the right to take." Pregnant words! Be happy that you live to hear them from the head of the Government. For the first time in the history of the Government, it has one an anti-slavery act; it has spoken an done an anti-slavery act; it has spoken an anti-slavery word. [Applause.] Enough to have gained in twelve months. The masses are to settle this queston, not the statesmen. They stand, to-day, doubting and incredulous of the purpose and intelligence of the masses. The President said to a leading Republican pelitician of New York, "Why don't you hold conventions often, and let me feel the mind of the nation? You cannot create as much antislavery feeling as we shall need before we get through this war." [Applause.] In other words, the President holds out his hands to the people, and says. "Am'I right? How far may I go?" Answer him. Tell him the ice is thick thus far, and will be thicker an arrow's flight ahead. Tell him that it his message to the Border Staes leads you to say Amen, a message to the Gulf States that says Liberty will have a ten-fold Amen. [Loud applause.]
