TUESDAY MORNING, APRIL 29.

CAPTURE OF NEW ORLEANS.

The report of the capture of New Orleans is credited. This is a terrible blow to the confederates and the entire downfall of the rebellion cannot be far off.

The defences below New Orleans were formidable. An account, furnished by a gentleman, who has just made his escape from that city, to the New York Herald, presents many interesting particulars:

SKETCH OF THE FORTIFICATIONS AROUND NEW ORLEANS.

Fort Jackson, on the Mississippi river, mounts one hundred and four guns, and Fort Philip, directly opposite, sixty-five. There are masked batteries on either side of the river, extending eight miles. These batteries are built in the form of triangles base to base. The rebels have thrown chains across the river, which are held by rafts at each end, and then anchored. They also have rafts loaded with turpentine in readiness to use against the soldiers of the Union, by floating them, when set on fire, in proximity to the Union fleet.

Within about nine miles of the city of New Orleans, on the old battle ground of the last war with England, there is a fortification extending from the river to the lake and to the Mexican Gulf Railroad. This fortification is built on a ridge, and after it crosses the Mexican Gulf Railroad it emerges into a swamp, where it is not completed, and again commences on the other side, where the Louisiana race course formerly was, extending to the lake. This fortification mounts forty-two guns, several of which were spiked one night by the Union soldiers, while the sentinels were "on duty."

Within about four to six miles of New Orleans, near Algiers, which is situated on a road back of the river, two forts are now built, large enough to hold from twelve to fifteen guns each. There is an intrenchment thrown up opposite the Mint, on the levee or bank of the river, mounting one gun; but four guns can be worked with facility there.

At Carrollton, five miles above the city, are two fortifications, extending across to Kennerville, thence to the Jackson Railroad, ten miles from the city, and on to the lake.

THE MILITIA OF NEW ORLEANS

Are poorly armed, and of doubtful fealty to the new government. The best and most reliable troops had all been sent away.

THE UNION SENTIMENT IN THE CITY, AND HOW IT IS TREATED.

There are a great many Union men in the city; but they are afraid to say any thing, as the parish prison is so contiguous, and a great many have been incarcerated there for the expression of Union sentiments.

There were seven old men, who had been following the occupation of fishermen on the lakes from seven to fifteen years, arrested in New Orleans and sent to the parish prison. Having been kept there some time, they were taken out of prison at twelve o'clock at night, hand-cuffed, and hanged, without any trial, because the city authorities thought they had known too much, and might run down to the blockading fleet for the purpose of either piloting them up or to give them information.

EVERY DAY LIFE IN NEW ORLEANS.

No such thing as gold or silver can be found in the city. Every business man issues his own money. Gold is worth eighty per cent. Pierre Soule is now one of the provost marshals, and has seven hundred men engaged to burn the city at the approach of the Union forces.

Salt, $12 per sack; butter, $1 20@1 25 per pound; coffee, $1 25 per pound; lard, 33 cents per pound; potatoes, $8 per barrel; flour, $20 per barrel; boots or shoes, $25 per pair, and all in these proportions for everything else. The people would die of starvation if they had not the free market, which supplies them with meat and vegetables twice a week.

Iron is scarce. They would buy any sort of this now very useful article at the highest prices—if they could get it.

There are eighty tons of powder stored in the new Marine Hospital. The banks have cut five dollar bills in two to make them two and a half.

As fast as the merchants procure Confederate money they buy cotton and sugar, intending, as soon as they are attacked by the Union forces, to put the American flag over this property for preservation. The merchants do not wish to hold their money, but invest it in real estate and such like.

There is one Union paper in the city—the Daily True Delta—edited by Mr. McGuiness. The Picayune had to suspend the publication of its evening edition for want of paper. It is now printed on yellow, brown and all kinds of paper that can be picked up, and is reduced to half its former size. Our informant further states that the worst secessionists in the city are Northern born men; the Vigilance Committee being composed almost exclusively of this class, of which E. A. Tyler, a jeweller on Canal street, is the principal.

THE TRAITOR TWIGGS.

General Twigges can be seen every day riding around the city in his barouche, drawn by a span of horses, looking the very picture of a traitor, at the expense of his young wife's fortune. The cause of General Twiggs resigning his commission was that the Mayor and Common Council appropriated $100,000 for the protection of the city, and appointed a committee of five to superintend the works, which made old Twiggs "chopping mad," because he could not have the handling of the money. He and the Mayor had a flare-up in consequence, and he sent in his resignation to Jeff. Davis, stating that he was too old and infirm to fill the office. Jeff. Davis then sent General Mansfield Lovell to take command of the Department of Louisiana.

THE BULL RUN (UNION) PRISONERS.

Four hundred and eighty-eight of the prisoners taken at Bull Run and Manassas were brought to New Orleans and incarcerated in the parish prison. They were escorted through the city by a regiment of darkies, under command of "Old Jordan," who was at the battle of New Orleans under General Jackson. These prisoners were placed sixteen in each cell, with one miserable blanket each. They were served with two scant meals a day, and were covered with vermin.

THE CONFEDERATE SOLDIERY.

The best drilled as well as the best dressed regiment in New Orleans is the negro regiment, and prominent among them can be seen "Old Jordan," who is captain of Company A. All the officers of this regiment are colored. Our informant says that the rebel officers and privates who came under his notice are the most drunken, demoralized set he ever saw. Most of the officers were drunk all the time he was there. D. M. Hildreth, proprietor of the St. Charles Hotel, has a company called the Hildreth Guard, and is an adjutant in one of the Louisiana regiments; Jas. O. Nixon, proprietor of the New Orleans Crescent, is a lieutenant colonel in Scott, cavalry company.

REBEL GUNBOATS BEING BUILT.

The rebels have the gunboat Florida and several others, not iron-clad, fitted up for action.

The two dry docks at Algiers have been removed and converted into gunboats, mounting twenty guns each. Their decks are perfectly level, with no bulwarks. The centre is built up slantingly, with two feet thickness of timber, and then plated, having only a hatchway towards the stern to place the men in. They are towed by steamers. Two gunboats have been built at the old Bayou Bridge for Lake Pontchartrain, by Sidney A. Porter. They have very large side wheels, but are not iron clad. They mount ten guns each.

The Manassas battering ram, or "the Mud Turtle," as it is more appropriately designated, is a complete failure. It is altogether broken down, and requires two steamers to help it into action.

The rebels are building two gunboats at Carrolton, on a new plan, invented by a young and ambitious mechanic, named Smith.

MISSISSIPPI RIVER FORTIFICATIONS.

There are no fortifications at Baton Rouge, Vicksburg, Natchez or Memphis. The only fortification on the Mississippi, from New Orleans to Memphis, is that of Fort Adams, on one of the bluffs, which mounts four guns. Fort Randolph and Fort Pillow, (the latter situated between the former and Memphis) were left almost comparatively deserted during the bombardment of Island No. 10. The guns were taken by the rebels from these forts to strengthen Island No. 10, leaving only a small number of men and five pieces for their protection.

From the above account, it would seem that there would be but little difficulty after Fort Jackson was taken, but the following from the New Orleans Picayune, of April 5, presents a more formidable aspect. It is no doubt exaggerated.

The Mississippi is fortified so as to be impassable for any hostile fleet or flotilla. Forts Jackson and St. Philip are armed with one hundred and seventy heavy guns (sixty-three pounders, rifled by Barkley Britten, and received from England.) The navigation of the river is stopped by a dam of about a quarter of a mile from the above forts. No flotilla on earth would force that dam in less than two hours, during which it would be within short and cross range of one hundred and seventy guns of the heaviest calibre, many of which would be served with red hot shot, numerous furnaces for which have been erected in every fort and battery.

In a day or two we shall have reddy two iron-cased floating batteries. The plates are four and a half inches thick, of the best hammered iron, received from England and France. Each iron-cased battery will mount twenty sixty-eight pounders, placed so as to skim the water, and striking the enemy's hull between wind and water. We have an abundant supply of incendiary shells, cupola furnaces for moulten iron, congreve rockets and fire ships.

Between New Orleans and the forts there is a constant succession of earthworks. At the Plain of Chalmette, near Janin's property, there are redoubts, armed with rifled cannon, which have been found to be effective at five miles range. A ditch thirty feet wide and twenty deep extends from the Mississippi to La Cipriere.

In Forts St. Philip and Jackson there are 3,000 men, of whom a goodly portion are experienced artillerymen and gunners who have served in the navy.

At New Orleans itself we have 32,000 infantry, and as many more quartered in the immediate neighborhood. In discipline and drill they are far superior to the Yankees. We have two very able and active Generals, who possess our entire confidence, Gen. Mansfield Lovell and Brigadier General Boggles. For Commodore we have old Hollins, a Nelson in his way.

Confiscation.

It is supposed that Mr. Sherman's bill, possibly modified in some respects, will pass the Senate, go to the Speaker's table, and be taken up by the House and passed.
