If Davis out-Davis, himself in any re-spect, it is as a logician. The lucus anon is his forte. Tallyrand's famous aphor-ism about the use of speech seems to be his pole-stone. A notable instance of this ap-pears in his late "message," recommending a conscription of all males in the Confed-eracy between the ages of eighteen and thirty-five years. The principal reason which he assigns for this step is contained in the following.settract:--

There is argument for you! So general, so resolute, so self-sacrificing is this spirit of resistance at the South, that a law of con-scription is necessary! But then, inti-ing into the service, but to keep the over-eager youth and aged out of it. As, there-fore, every law pre-supposes the imposing of penalties for breaches of it, we infer that this set must contain clauses providing for the exemplary punishment of all below the age of eighteen or above that of thirty-five, who may presume to offer themselves as do-fendors of Secessis. Alast to them the door is shut for the present. The juveniles must grow older or the seniles must grow younger before they can be legally clothed younger before they can be legally clothed with the panopoly of insurrection. They must soldier at home in time of war, and leave their fireshies only when these are leave their intendes only when these are invaded. But is it not droll that a consorip-tion act had to be passed to "regulate and restrain," not to call forth, the Southern people to defend their country from inva-sion?- We would like to publish the clauses which prohibit so imperatively the enlist-ment of all except the favored few between eighteen and thirty-five. my2:dly Non-Recognition -- Rebels Snubbed.
