Rumored Capture of Richmond---Passes to Visit the South.

BALTIMORE, May 15.—The city is filled with rumors brought by the passengers of the Old Point boat, that Richmond has been taken, though there is nothing known officially in relation to the matter.

The Old Point boat has arrived but brings no letters.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON CITY, May 14, 1862.

Ordered, that all applications for passes to visit Fortress Monroe, Norfolk, Yorktown, or other places on the waters of the Chesapeake, be hereafter made to Major-General John A. Dix, at Baltimore.

(Signed) EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

From Pittsburgh Landing---Attempt of Two Rebel Regiments to Desert ---Dolorful Account of Affairs.

CHICAGO, May 15.—A special dispatch to the Times, from Cairo, says:

By the City of Memphis, from Pittsburgh Landing, we learn that on Monday two rebel regiments from Kentucky and Tennessee attempted to desert their cause and come over en masse to the federal army; the enemy held them in check and mutiny ensued; a strong force from our advanced lines was sent over to interfere, and in a short time returned with about sixty prisoners, mostly from the ranks of the deserting regiments. They give a dolorful account of affairs about Beauregard's army, and confirm the previous statements that the troops from the Border States are anxious to return to their former allegiance.

The story that the enemy lack provisions is denied by deserters, who say they have plenty of subsistence at Corinth.

Arrival of Sick and Wounded Union and Rebel Soldiers.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—In addition to the steamers Hero and Kent, which brought hither the released Union prisoners from Richmond, last night, the Kennebec has arrived with upward of 450 wounded rebels from Williamsburg. These men for the greater part, are but slightly wounded, and are attended by rebel surgeons and nurses. A strict guard is kept over this boat, and no visitors are permitted.

The steamer State of Maine has also arrived with 320, the J. D. Warner, with 400, and the Elm City, with 400 sick and wounded from the various Union regiments. They are being removed to the various hospitals to-day.

Major Coffee.

LOUISVILLE, May 14.—Major, not Colonel, Coffee, who was released by Morgan on parole, arrived here en route for Washington, to endeavor to effect an exchange of himself for Lieut. Col. Wood, of Morgan's band.

Death of Hon. Chas. Jared Ingersoll.

PHILADELPHIA, May 15.—The Hon. Charles Jared Ingersoll died yesterday.

PASSAGE UP THE JAMES RIVER.

Letter from on Board the Galena---Engagement with the Rebel Forts---Flight of the Rebel Gunboats, etc.

We are indebted to a friend, says the Baltimore American, for the following extracts from a letter from a relative on board the iron-clad gunboat Galena, engaged in the movement up James river:

GUNBOAT GALENA, Sunday, May 11.

Dear Brother—I suppose by this time you have heard of the Galena leaving Hampton Roads. I was glad of it, for such a fine ship as this ought not to be kept idle in such times as these, and the boys were all anxious for a fight. We got under way and left the Roads fifteen minutes past seven o'clock on the morning of the 8th, and it was not long till we passed Sewell's Point, without one shot being fired at us.

As we passed Newport News we were hailed by loud and long cheers from the men on the fort, who were glad to see us make a move to help their brother soldiers. But we had only passed them about twenty-five minutes when to our great joy, a battery hove in sight. It was first seen by the well experienced eye of our gallant Captain. He gave orders to Lieut. Newman to call all hands to quarters, which he did in his usual cool way, for he is always cool and brave. This order was promptly obeyed by the crew, who thought every minute or hour to try their skill on the Rebels. They soon had a chance, for fifteen minutes to ten o'clock the ball was opened by our pivot gun forward. The shot fell short. The second and third were fired, but there was no reply.

We ran in under their gun range, and then they opened on us from six or eight guns, but all of the shot fell harmless against our iron sides. I hardly think they knew what was coming at them. We let fly from our whole battery, and made it pretty warm for them. We sailed back and forward by the fort three or four times, and soon levelled their flag and made it drag in the dust. After an action of forty minutes they ran like "red sharks," as they always do, from the well directed fire of our brave sailors. Not one shot struck us in the hull of the engagement.

Text No. 2.—The action commenced about one o'clock, three-quarters of an hour after we had silenced the first battery. In this fort we found a more formidable opponent than the first. It mounted twelve guns, and after an hour and fifteen minutes' bombardment, eleven of them were silenced. The remaining one fought us for an hour afterwards, making this bombardment of two hours and fifteen minutes' duration. The gunboats Aristook and Port Royal were with us, but did not take an active part in the engagement, though they did some execution with their long guns.

FLIGHT OF REBEL GUNBOATS.

The rebel gunboats Jamestown and Patrick Henry were lying under the guns of the second fort, but, instead of assisting its defence, they got up steam and ran away with all speed towards Richmond. Our damage in the engagement was small. One shot struck the smokestack, and went through her bulwarks under the hammock nettings. No one was injured. One or two shots struck us, but they only left their mark on our iron mail, and glided off.

After passing the second fort we started up the river, but the buoys have been removed and there we stuck hard and fast, waiting for high tide. The batteries silenced were called the Upper and Lower Shoal Batteries. Great praise is given to Capt. Rodgers, First Lieut. Newman and Engineer in Chief Thompson.

LATER.—We are just getting off shore, and a boat has come on board from Gen. McClellan, by which I send this. We will be off for City Point in the morning.

FROM FORTRESS MONROE.

Latest from Gen. McClellan---"On to Richmond"---Affairs at Norfolk---Rebels Refuse to go Home.

FORTRESS MONROE, May 15, 1862.

The weather to-day has been decidedly hot and oppressive, so much so that a great many availed themselves of the opportunity of taking a roll in old ocean.

We are all in high spirits, and are momentarily looking for good news from Richmond. The latest intelligence received here from that quarter, combined with the blowing up and destruction of the Merrimac, leaves little or no doubt of the design of the rebels to evacuate the Capitol so soon as General McClellan closes the toil of his ansaconda more tightly around them.

A large number of our officers and citizens daily visit Norfolk, and some few of the citizens from that place have arrived here on their way North. It is expected that they will be allowed to go North to purchase goods, provided they first take the oath of Allegiance.

Gen. Wool visits Norfolk daily, but generally returns to the Fortress in the evening.

The President, Secretary Stanton and Secretary Chase, by their active co-operation with the authorities here in re-possessing Norfolk, and "driving to the wall" the Merrimac, have won golden opinions from the army and navy and all the civilians at this post. The President said he would not leave until the work was accomplished, and finished up within the week returning to Washington on the eve of this present day, 7th inst.

The Baltimore steamer will take up this evening the twenty sailors who were taken prisoners from the Congress and carried to Richmond. They were released with the other prisoners from Richmond.

Assistant Paymaster MCCLELLAN, Surgeon Heiskell, Boatswain Woodward, Captain of Forecastle Church, about six sailors from Congress, and his advance is at the Williamsburg crossing of the Pamunkey river, within fifteen miles of Richmond. The Monitor arrived here on Monday, and was again on guard, forming a portion of the regular reserve. An examination of the map will show that he is now full fifteen miles above West Point, at the head of the York river. In the meantime the Monitor and Galena are cutting off the communication of the rebels with the South side of the James river, and are pressing on towards Richmond, silencing the rebel batteries and overcoming all obstructions.

The deserters, who are constantly coming in, agree in their statements that the evacuation of Richmond is rapidly progressing, and that the effort of the retreating rebels is merely to hold back Gen. McClellan so as to obtain time to remove all their stores. They also say that the destruction of the city by fire is threatened, and that it will require the utmost efforts on the part of the citizens to prevent its consummation. That the evacuation is now progressing there is no manner of doubt, and the Government archives are being conveyed South.

FROM NORFOLK.

Affairs at Norfolk to-day have considerably improved, and good order and quiet everywhere prevail. The excellent conduct of the troops garrisoning the city, and the good nature and lack of hostile sentiment evinced by them towards the people, are having a most admirable effect. They mix freely with the people, insist on arguing the point with those wedded to rebellion, and will not be baffled by frowns or sour looks.

The Secessionists at last have come to the conclusion that the Merrimac has ceased to exist, and is in the deep bosom of the ocean buried. Pieces of her timbers, and some of her irons have been fished up and brought to the city and recognized by the worshippers of the marine monster.

THE FEDERAL PRISONERS.

The released Federal prisoners from Richmond are still on board the two rebel steamers—Curtis Peck and Northampton—at Newport News, but are about being transferred this evening to the Hero and the Kent, and will be conveyed directly to Washington. The delay in the return of the boats has been caused by the trouble among the three hundred rebel prisoners who are to be sent back to Richmond from Fortress Monroe.

Nearly one hundred of the three hundred have refused to be released, or rather declare their determination not to return to Dixie, and have taken the oath of allegiance. They were coaxed, threatened and abused by their officers, but all of no avail, and it is believed that many more of them would refuse to return if it were not for the influence and threats of their officers. The Government has and always separate the officers from the privates, and thus allow the latter to act as they think proper.—Correspondent of the Baltimore American.

COMMERCIAL RECORD.

Weekly Review of the Pittsburgh Markets.

[Reported specially for the Pittsburgh Gazette.

PITTSBURGH, THURSDAY, May 15, 1862.

River News.

The river remains stationery at this point with three feet eight inches, reported on Glass House. The weather yesterday was clear and pleasant and very favorable for business, which we regret to say, was not very active at the wharf. Freights do not appear to be falling off much, but the low water, prevents boats from taking anything like a full trip.....The Clara Dean, from Louisville, was the only arrival beyond the regular packets. She had a fair cargo, including three thousand bbls of flour.....The Iowa left for St. Louis about noon yesterday, with a moderate trip and drawing full three and a half feet. It was thought, however, that she would get over Glass House with but little trouble.....It was rumored yesterday that the Prima Donna was aground at the "Sisters" on Wednesday.....Capt. Willoughby's new boat "Silver Lake No. 5" is about completed, and as will be seen by card, she is announced for Cincinnati and Louisville. She is of very light draught, and will experience but little difficulty in making out a full trip on the present stage of water. Our old friend Mellon, formerly of the Key West, will have charge of this office.....Capt. Ben. Rhodes's new boat will commence loading, for St. Louis, next week. Capt. Gilmore expects to have his new steamer ready for business in a week or two.

LOUISVILLE, May 13, 1862

Eds Gazette: The steamer Marengo, with Government freight, arrived at this port to-day. She was immediately chartered by the Government, and cleared for Pittsburgh Landing, Tennessee River tomorrow, loaded with Commissary stores.

A. C., JR.

FOR ST. LOUIS—The new and elegant steamer Parthenia, Capt. Brown, will positively leave for St. Louis to-morrow. The clerks are Messrs. Robinson and Vandegrift.
