Adjournment of Congress.

A letter to the Baltimore Sun says:

The Senate will got fix a day for the adjournment of Congress and journment of Congress and journment of Congress and the tax bill shall have passed. The House fixed upon a day that is near at hand. It was remarked in the conservative caucus that the President has the power; in case of disagreement of the two Houses with respect to the time of adjournment, to adjourn them. The constitutional power referred to enables the President to act only in case the two Houses shall fix a different day for the Baltimore and only for the dome to go on. It is argued by them, that it had better be put in place, rather than to lie shout exposed to rain and danger of accident.

A.New Trouble in Virginia. A letter from the Peninsula says that the slaves have generally turned out, and dressed themselves up in their holliday suits and refuse to work, unless they are paid wages. The letter gives an amusing instance of the trouble this has created, and Kentucky has been the most petted of of the helpless condition of a people who the border States, and she has been the have grown up to depend on the labor of

But it was held when the question arose in Van Buren's Presidency, that the President could, in case of the disagreement. referred to, adjourn the two Houses to a certain day. Thus, if the House fixed one day and the Senate another, the coming summer, the President may adjourn them, for instance, to some day in the autumn.

We hope the Senate will steadily refuse to fix a day for adjournment. At a time like this, when events of vast importance are occurring daily, Congress ought to remain in session. The country is passing through a fearful crisis, and all the wishing of solvernment as well as all its now-

ME. Kellogg or Confiscation.—There is reason to believe that Mr. Kellogg, of Illinois, will astonish his friends of the conservative canous, during the discussion in the House on Confiscation next week. He will take ground in favor of thorough and immediate legislative forfeiture of the property, real and personal, of the rebel ringlesders, as the bill provides.

"men can be got along with well enough," but the women are exceedingly violent and insulting. This sort of malignity doubtless arises from sympathy or "their boys," who were first to take up rebellious arms, and with whom the counsels of age and experience went for nothing. These boys were to the great conspirators like clay in the hands of the potter. The mothers and daughters are continually thinking of these "young Southern gentlemen, every one of women in Georgetown has, threatened to shoot. FROM THE FLOTILLA.

The Rebel Fleet Preparing to give Battle Anew--None of their Rams Sunk. CAIRO, May 14.—We have received the following dispatch from our correspondent, written just as the mail tug was leaving the cipation we suppose there will be differences of opinion. Such an act was held to be perfectly legal by John Quixer Adams, nearly twenty years ago, when he developed and defended such a war power, on the floor of Congress, and no Southern man at that time entered the lists againt him.

There being such a power, if Gen. Huster has legally exercised it, the slaves in those States are absolutely free, even though. Gen. Hunter's Proclamation should here after be revoked, as a man onco free cannot be remanded back to slavery, except by force, and in defiance of law.

How events move. Last summer, Gen. Farmont issued his immortal Proclamation, which will render his name ever famous west, are enough to make the most cowardly desperate.

An officer of the Union flotilla went out An officer of the Union Bottim went out in a skiff on Friday afternoon within sight of the rebels, and for more than an hour remained taking observations. His report to the Commedore confirms the state of activity in their fleet and the fact that their rame ware not sunk in their late. that their rams were not sunk in their late engagement.

The rebels in the late fight were provided with apparatus for throwing hot water, and actually tried it on the Cincinnati. The bursting of their hose only prevented great have among the Union crew. This bursting of the scalding concern probably gave rise to the idea that the rebel had collapsed a flue.

at first supposed. His wound is painful, but not necessarily mortal.

The rebels have to-day perpetrated a joke The rebels have to-day perpetrated a joke which deserves mention. A flag of truce came steaming around the point yesterday and demanded upon what terms the Federals would surrender. Our gunboats are being protected from the effect of rebel rams, in case of another fight, by a float of cedar logs attached to their sides.—Special dispatch to the Chicago Times.

SITUATION AT COBINTH .- Gen. Halleck has got his army within two or three miles of Corinth, but a battle is less imminent than the proximity of the two armies would pre-suppose. It is now clear that the rebel intrenchments are insulated by an extensive with the contract of t sive swamp country which can be bridged by corduroy, but which cannot, without im-mense labor, furnish approaches to the ennems is stor, iurnish approaches to the en-emy's works for siege guns, or opportuni-ties for field manœuvers. "The siege of Corinth, if it become an event of history, will deserve a second Byron for its poet.
Something worse than the topographical genius of Beauregard is opposed to the further advance of our army. We now encounter the almost insurmountable barrier of nature itself. Possibly the area and dif of nature itself. Possibly the area and dif-ficulty of this "dismal swamp" are over es-timated, but it cannot be denied that the attack will probably prove a slow and ex-ceedingly laborious one.—Chicago Tribune.
