Slavery has impoverished the South, and is now involving it in one general ruin.

It would be a mercy to the slave States to remove from them a curse which has brought nothing but ignorance, vice and wretchedness upon them. This the radicals seek. As patriots they desire to use this great occasion—an occasion not of their own seeking—to rid the country forever from an evil almost too intolerable to be borne, and which no wise nation would suffer to exist an hour longer than was possible. Had slavery been content with its position in the country, it might have ts position in the country, it might have the soldier material of the Southern States. lasted for many years; but it raised its

The election for deputies to the Prussian lower House took place on the 8th instant. lower House took place on the 8th instant.

The result is a complete triumph of the Liberals, and a signal rebuke given to the King, as well as the Von der Heydt Ministry. The exact complexion of the new doubt existed that the Opposition had secured an almost overwhelming majority, obliging the Ministry to abandon its reactionary policy or resign, unless the King is willing to encounter the risks of a revolution.

But the agreement made was merely verbal, and so continued until nearly three-quarters of a million had been drawn. Suspicion began to be entertained at the Bank that everything was not going right, and some correspondence was had with Mr. Reynolds, who assured them that the Great Western interest would be responsible. The number of electors in Prussia, out of a population of eighteen millions, is ninety-nine thousand six hundred and thirty, of which number fully five thousand are in the army. The number whe voted was about sixty-three thousand. It is believed those who refrained from so doing belonged to the Ministerial interest, as the Progressista party were exceedingly active. Nearly all the members of the Cabinet were defeated. At Tilsit, Von der Heydt had only twenty-five votes against three hundred and eighty-six for his opponent. The nine members from Berlin are all Liborals.

A VERY erroneous idea is indulged in by pealed. in the world; many confidently asserting that London, or, as it is frequently termed, the Great Metropolis, is far superior, both in size and the number of its inhabitants. the Great-Metropolis, is far superior, both in size and the namber of its inhabitants. But such is not the case. Jeddo, the capital of Japan, is, without exception, the largest and most populous city in the world, the contains the vast number of 1,500,000 dwellings and 5,000,000 of human sonls. Many of the streets are nineteen Japaneseries in length, which is equivalent to 22 English miles.

The commerce of Jeddo far exceeds that of any other city in the world, and the sea along its coast is constantly white with the sails of ships. Their vessels sail to the southern portion of the empire, where they are laden with rice, tea, sea coal, tobacco, silk, cotton and tropleal fruits, all of which find a ready market in the north, and then return freighted with salt, oil, isingless, and various other productions of the north, which have a market in the south.

I wish I had had the privilege of a horseback ride, before this war broke out, through the region whence the rebel army was recruited and drafted. Of their dead and

We like the old-fashioned doctrine the best, and believe it to be the true interpretation of our fundamental law; and we think those who are continually pleading the Constitution in defence of slavery do great wrong to the noble work of our forefathers. Slavery in the States, we admit; is tolerated by the Constitution—nothing more. But slavery has assailed the life of the nation, and it has become necessary in order to save the country, to destroy it, or at least to put it out of the power of slavery over to do us harm again.
