A Murderous Assault. On Saturday evening, a quarryman, named William Rafferty, committed an outrageous sasault and battery upon two brothers, named Richey, residing in Allegheny. Rafferty had been employed for some time by Richey, quarrying the stone, and on Saturday he asked his boss what he was going to pay him. Richey answered that he would pay him a dollar a day, but Rafferty was not satisfied with that amount. Richey then teld him to call at his bouse after supper, and he would pay him off. Rafferty called on Richey, and got his wages in full at the amount atated, but he told Richey that he would not have worked at all if he had known that the worked at Richey replied that he (Raiferty) was not a very good workman, and he thought he paid him enough. The former was so badly fojured that he could not appear to prosecute, but his brother made an information before Mayor Drum, and after a hearing Raffart was committed. Rafferty was committed to juil to answer, in default of $500 bail. When arrested he had possession of the slung shot-a most murder-ous weapon, weighing over half a pound, and attached to a rope for fastening around the wrist.

On Saturday evening, a German widow, and the mother of several children, attempted to dream herself in the canal, near the Federal Street Depot, Allegheny, but was prevented by the watchman at the depot. She was taken to the Mayor's office, where she told a very and story. She stated that her husband died some time since, leaving her with several arke Green, a resident of Zanesville, O. and a brakesman on the Central Ohio railroad, was instantly killed near Bellair. He was standing in the door of the baggage car waving his hand to some girls by the roadside, while the train was approaching the first tunnel west of Bellair, immediately adjoining which, on the west-sile, is a very narrow bridge. Green, having his stendino directed elsewhere, did not observe the bridge, and leaning forward a little too far, his head struck one of the timbers. He was knocked out of the car, and fell into the creek below. As the train shot into the dark tunnel, the absence of the breakman was not noticed until the baggage car werged upon the other side, when the engine was stopped. The train men going back found the unfortunate brakesman dead.

Killed on the Railroad. On Friday morning last a young man named

On one occasion he cut down a small wainut tree growing on his place, had it sawed into boards, and the cofin was made from a portion of the lumber. Without communicating his purpose to any one, he took the board to a cabinet maker, had the cofin made, and one day it came home while he was absent, causing considerable consternation in his family. He was rather an eccentric person, but a kind neighbor and a good citizen. Last week this uncomfertable reminder of death was brought forth, varinished, and he was carried in it to the grave.

Information was given to the Mayor's police, andialthough part of these articles, probably all of them, had been stolen more than a year ago, a watch was kept the following night, in expectation that the thief would come to get his bouty!
