The Warren Mail contains an interesting sketch of the "closing moments" of the Wariren Bank, (or the North-western Bank, as it has been called since its "regeneration.") Two-thirds of the currency of Warren county was made up of this trash, and the people are loud and bitter in their denunciations. The Mail 22.78: The facts thus far developed appear to be The facts thus far developed appear to be buildly these: Last Monday night a dispatch owns received from parties connected with the Bank in New Yerk, stating that the bills had been thrownout there and telling them to take ears of the depositors and bill holders. Judge Brown, meanwhile, had been three times to New York within as many weeks, having returned only on Thursday or Friday, and the public were given to understand that the bank was all right. The next morning he left for New York again, and Mr. Armstrong, the Cashier, went to Eric. This news had leaked out bafore morning, and when the Bank opened quite a panie striken crowd went in to get their money redeemed, although every Bank in the State is allowed to suspend till February work — about 100 m deep their morning a notice appeared on the closed doors that the Bank would not be opened for redemption till Judge. Brown gets back, though it don't promise anything even then. So you see we are a little sprious to know, not exactly whether "John Brown soul in marching on," but whether Rasseless Brown will be marching home with the soul of the Bank? Bank? The idea of a Bank's breaking when all Banks are suspended, is a little novel, we think, and shows financiering which deserves llooking lake. CITY AFFAIRS.

Since the publication of the war news, the most intense excitement and painful suriety has been everywhere manifested in this community. The probability that the regiments from this county, in General McClellan's army, may have suffered severe loss, has created the most feared apprehensions, and exaggerated toports are figing about to the effect that rivute dispatches have been received announcing, that Col. Rowley and Col. Black's regiments have both been cut to pieces, etc. It is also runored that Colonel Rippsy and Colonel Hay's men have suffered severely, but we are free to say that, up to this hour, no information has been received deliculated to strengthen these reports. The loss may be severe enough, but it is the part of wisdom not to credit these wild runors. There can be no interesting local details, which gives much interesting local details, which will interest the families of our troops in that department. We will publish it in this aftermoof's paper:

Its publication has been delayed a little on account of haying to make it larger, by some afty pages, than was at first intended, and will, therefore, be all the better for the delay. and what I owe to my queen and my country.

The truth, after all, is that the Commissioners of the Emperor have departed entirely from the Convention of London, with the determination of acting on their own account only. The pretext was the protection which they insisted on extending to the Mexican among syrants; Almonte and the rest, who arrived at year Core, avowing thaththey came, with the fixed plan of destroying the republic in, order to create a monarchy in favor of the Archduke Maximilian. Since then, in the Conference of the 10th, five days before the negotiation with the Mexican Government, M. de Saligny declared that he would no longer treat with the Government of Juarez.

In the last process verbal all is clearly expressed, clearly established—in extenso, as the diplomatists say—and that document alone will suffice for public opinion to determine who is right and who is wrong.

As to myself (a Spaniard,) you will readily understand that I could not support this radical change of the political system of this country if a prince of the Austrian monarchy was to be imposed on it. The Allies came here bound by the Convention of London, and we could not depart from it without placing ourselves in the wrong. I withdraw, then, with my troops, and go to Havans, to await the orders of my Government. Yours, &o., PRIM.

Butler's Last View of the Contra-band Question. The following instructions to Brigadier General Phelps, commanding at Carrolton, contain a comprehensive expression of Gan. Butler's views as to the disposal of fugitive slaves who come within the lines of our army :

Headquarters, Department of the Guly, New Orleans, May 9, 1862. New Obleans, May 9, 1862.

Gen. Phelps—Mr. J. B. G. Armond says that a boy by name of Irwin Pardon, whose services he claims, has come within our lines. The course which I have adopted in such cases is this: If I have any use for the services of such a boy I employ him without any scruple; if I have not, I do not harbor him, as my subsistence would by no means serve for so many extra men that I do not need. If you have any use for him, use him; if not, is he not like any other vagrant about the camp? Respectfully,

B. F. Butler,

Maj. Gen. Commanding.

Interesting Letter from Gen. Prim.

Gen. Prim, who commanded the Spanish troops in Mexico, arrived at New York, on Saturday, on his way to Europe. The London Post, of the 17th of May, publishes the following letter from Gen. Prim, in relation to the Mexican imbroglio:

ORILABA, April 14, 1862.

Inflexible destiny is stronger than the will of man. Could I have doubted it, what has just occurred here would have convinced me.

The triple alliance no longer exists. The soldiers of the Emperor remain in this country to establish a throne for the Archduke Marimilian—what madness!—while the sold diers of England and Spain withdraw from the Mexican soil.

You, who are aware of the attachment I have for the Emperor, and the truly fracter of England and Spain withdraw from the Mexican soil.
