Pittsburgh Gazette.

TUESDAY MORNING, JUNE 10.

In pursuance of a resolution, adopted by the REPUBLICAN EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE, OF ALLEGHENY COUNTY, at their meeting held on Saturday, May 24th, 1862, notice is hereby given that PRIMARY MEETINGS will be held in the various Wards, Boroughs and Townships of the County, at the usual places of holding elections in each Precinct, on SATURDAY, JUNE 21st, 1862, for the election of TWO DELEGATES from each Precinct, to a Convention, to be held on the FOLLOWING MONDAY.

The Convention will assemble on MONDAY, JUNE 23, 1862, at the COURT HOUSE, at 11 o'clock a. m., to nominate a PRESIDENT JUDGE OF COMMON PLEAS, &c., an ASSOCIATE LAW JUDGE OF COMMON PLEAS, &c., and a COUNTY CONTROLLER, and to elect DELEGATES to the STATE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION, to be held in JULY, 1862.

The Primary Meetings in the townships will be held between the hours of 2 and 6 p. m., and in the cities and boroughs between 3 and 7 p. m., of said day. The appointment of the delegates in the townships will be by marking, and in the cities and boroughs by ballot.

J. F. DEAVO, Chairman.
S. SCHOYER, Jr., Secretary.

Mr. Sumner.

The Secesh-sympathisers have a peculiar hatred of Mr. SUMNER. Ever since the Southern party failed to assassinate him by the agency of their bully, BROOKS, they have pursued him with a hatred of the most satanic description. The Pittsburgh Post, in imitation of the New York Herald, spares no opportunity of venting its spite upon a man whose genius, patriotism and eloquence are of such a transcendant character that the sympathizers with Jeff. DAVIS feel that he must be removed, or their hopes of reinstating the Democratic proslavery domination are gone forever.

The following is a sample of the language used by the Post, when speaking of Mr. SUMNER:

> This cold blooded traitor, whose efforts are alone directed to elevate the negro and degrade the white, has the audacity to cloak one of his accursed schemes with a hypocritical affectation for the sacredness of the Constitution. Such another compound of fanaticism, treachery, hypocrisy and poltroonery does not occupy any public position in the country. The people have not yet seen the depth of his hatred against the institutions of his country. He has no love for this Union or its Constitution; his politics are altogether English, while talking poetry about the sad condition of the slave, he votes enormous taxes to be gathered from white labor, and, like your true English aristocrat and tory, he is all profession and sympathy for some impracticable and cheap theory, while all his acts show him to be insensible to genuine charity, and unfeeling to true philanthropy.

This is the talk for a paper whose sympathies with Southern traitors, even its consummate hypocrisy cannot hide.

Even in the very paper from which the above extracts are made, it rejoices that the traitor STARKE has not been expelled from the Senate, and it assails glorious old Ben. WADE, because he will not disgrace himself, and outrage the feelings of his constituents, and break the laws, by fighting a duel with the traitor VALLANDIGHAM, because that wretch dare to blackguard him. All its instincts incline to such men as VALLANDIGHAM and STARKE and BRIGHT—men whose names will go down to infamy in their country's history, while that of SUMNER will stand second to none of this age as a patriot, a statesman, a philanthropist and an orator.

The vindictiveness of the Post overshoots its mark. Not content with assailing Mr. Sumner, it assails the tax bill through him. "He votes enormous taxes" is one of the charges made, when it so happens that Mr. Powell, of Kentucky, was the only man in the Senate who recorded his vote against the taxes necessary to keep up the public credit, and to raise money to crush out this accursed rebellion. Mr. Powell is one of the Post's stripe. He pretends to be for the Union, but it is such a Union as Jeff. Davis would approve of, and which would reduce the Northern people to the condition of serfs at the feet of the pro-slavery traitors.

The Post has inadvertently thrown off the mask. It has made friendship to the national tax bill a crime, for which its anathemas are poured out upon Mr. Sumner. We shall next have it opposing the raising of money to pay the soldiers, for it is impossible to continue paying them without a tax to keep up the national credit.

The Post tries to make it appear that Mr. Sumner is in a position of opposition to the President. This is not the case. These two distinguished officials are on terms of the warmest friendship, and heartily sympathize with each other. The President is a man of too great a heart, and of too good sense, not to appreciate the brilliant talents and extraordinary services of the distinguished Massachusetts Senator. While they may not see exactly alike as to the best mode of overcoming the rebellion, and of bringing about the restoration of a more perfect Union, yet they entirely agree in the determination that the rebellion shall be put down, and the supremacy of the Government be established over every foot of Southern territory, let it cost what it may. Mr. Sumner thinks that the destruction of slavery is a necessity; an indispensable condition precedent to the complete restoration of the Union. The President lingers over the final step, but the moment he is satisfied that the salvation of the Union requires the destruction of slavery, he will not hesitate a moment longer. With as much joy as Mr. Sumner could feel, will he sign the fiat, which will seal the death-warrant of rebellion and proclaim liberty throughout the land.

Gen. Saxton at Harper's Ferry.

The report of Gen. SAXTON of his brief but brilliant operations at Harper's Ferry, is very interesting. When the news of Gen. Banks' forced retreat from Winchester reached Washington, the Secretary of War suddenly improvised an army at Harper's Ferry, the troops being drawn from Pennsylvania, New York and Maryland, and gave the command to Gen. Saxton, who was waiting for transport to South Carolina, as its Military Governor. Gen. Saxton, with his little army of 7,000 men, and two batteries, for five days and nights kept at bay Jackson's army of 20,000 men. Gen. Saxton's arrangements were so admirable that Jackson could not cross the river without terrible loss, and after battering, firing and skirmishing for five days and nights he withdrew, only in time to make his escape from the troops gathering around him. It is said he wept with vexation when he found himself baulked by a General and an army, where no General or army had been a week before.

☞ Much interesting matter will be found on our first and fourth pages this morning.

"The Democrats Do the Fighting."

FIGURES AGAINST ASSERTIONS.

We take the following article from the Harrisburg Telegraph, and commend it to the attention of our readers:

It has become fashionable with a certain class of politicians of late to claim, first, that the north originated the causes of this war, and, second, that the men composing our armies were mainly the adherents of the Democratic party. These assertions are made now, when the brilliant results of the struggle are about to crown the government with glory. When rebellion was organized, and when our flag was assailed at Sumter, the Democratic party was not only opposing the war, but its leaders were actually in sympathy with the leaders of the rebellion. Every measure that contemplated the vigorous vindication of the federal authority, was characterised as coercion. Every proposition to maintain the federal power by the force of arms, was regarded by the Democracy as suicidal. It was only when rebellion had completed its preparations and exhibited its bloody front in all the horrid attire of war, that the leaders of the Democratic party yielded to the danger, and were induced then only to act when the destruction of their own lives and property became imminent.

From a careful compilation of the army vote in the different camps containing Pennsylvanians, we have been enabled to arrive at facts and figures which completely overturn the claims of Democratic politicians at this time, that the army is composed principally of adherents of the Democratic party. We have the soldiers' vote from fifty-five counties, derived from official sources, and the following is the result as presented by these returns:

Republican	9,370
Democratic	1,860
Republican excess	7,510

Eleven counties have not yet been heard from, six of which are Republican and five Democratic. The returns from these counties, allowing the same proportion as in the counties reported, will largely increase this vote, so that when the aggregate is exhibited, it will be seen that instead of the Democracy composing the main strength of our armies, they are actually far, very far behind the Republicans in that branch of the government service. When we have completed our compilation, we shall lay the figures before the people, not so much to disprove the bragadocia claims of a few old political hacks, as to show to the people that not only the merit of the great principle involved in this contest is of Republican origin, but that a large majority of the men who are supporting that principle at the risk of their lives are also Republicans.

The Pittsburgh Post, with the mendacity which is characteristic of that paper, asserted that the Democrats did the fighting in this war. Without the least provocation, and without a particle of authority for its assertion, it endeavored to claim for its own political party the chief credit of enlisting and fighting in the holy cause of the Union and good government. Not that it loves the Union, or the Government either, but because it wished to create a popular sentiment for its party which was wholly undeserved. How much foundation there was for its assertion, will be seen by the above article. About the same proportion, of five to one—five Republicans to one Democrat—has been found to be the result, wherever comparisons have been made. These comparisons have in every instance that we have seen, been provoked by Democratic papers, as it was in the case of the Post. If the comparison has made against them it is their own fault. If they had been true patriots, they would have scorned to make any invidious remark concerning the politics of those who nobly rushed to the defense of their country. But politics with them eats out patriotism. The party is with them the chief thing—the country secondary. They have very nearly ruined the country and destroyed their party by corruption, fraud and treason; they are now trying to recover their lost sway by false pretences. Their failure is as signal as that of their Secesh friends in their war upon the Union.

Interesting from Port Royal.

The United States gunboat Bienville arrived Saturday night with three schooners in tow, which were captured off Charleston in attempting to run the blockade. Their names are the Providence, La Croilla and Rebecca, all are loaded with provisions from Nassau.

During her stay there she captured the two English screw steamers Stottin and Patras, also three valuable schooners, while endeavoring to run the blockade. The steamers were sent to New York; the schooners she towed to this port. The aggregate estimated value of these prizes is about $100,000.

The Stettin is loaded with one thousand boxes of tea, two hundred cases of champagne, forty tons of brandy, and a large cargo of assorted stores, valued in all at between $200,000 and $300,000.

The Patras is loaded with arms and ammunition, coffee, liquors, &c. Among the former are fifty cases of arms and seventy-five tons of powder.

She brought to Philadelphia over 100 passengers—chiefly crews of prizes captured.

The Bienville left Port Royal on the 2nd of June. The Presidents' revocation of Hunter's Order had been received.

General Hunter had organized a brigade of contrabands, and was about to assign them to building intrenchments and fortifications.

A sharp engagement had occurred with the rebel batteries at Stono.

A letter to the New York Herald, from Hilton Head, says:

Railroad communication between Charleston and Savannah has been cut off. On Wednesday night, the 28th inst., General Stevens obtained permission to execute a plan which he long since formed, and which he has been ready at any moment since the occupation of Beaufort to undertake. The Fiftieth Pennsylvania regiment, Colonel Crist, two companies of the First Massachusetts cavalry, and a section of the First Connecticut battery, comprising in all a force of about eight hundred men, were accordingly ordered to move at once, and started for Pocotaligo at midnight.

At daybreak our forces reached the station—a small village on the line of the Charleston and Savannah Railroad—and were met by nearly one thousand of the enemy. A skirmish ensued, and after a few moments' sharp fighting the rebels were driven from their position, carrying off their wounded, but leaving seven dead bodies and two prisoners on our hands. Our loss was two killed and five wounded—all of the Fiftieth Pennsylvania. One of the killed was Captain Charles Parker, of Reading, who fell while leading his company into action. He was a fine officer, and a splendid specimen of a man. I am unable to learn, in time for the Bienville's mail, the names of the wounded.

After the rebels had retired, our forces tore up the track for some distance on either side of the railroad. Col. Crist remained in undisturbed possession of the position until two o'clock on Friday morning, when, the enemy appearing in strong force, he deemed it prudent to retire, which he did successfully, arriving at Beaufort yesterday noon.

Lieut. Rush, of the Fiftieth Pennsylvania, was killed by the accidental discharge of his pistol while preparing for the march on Wednesday evening.

The revenue steamer Flora, Capt. Fengar, has just returned from Stono, where she was anchored, within seven miles of Charleston, last night. Capt. Fengar reports that the enemy in that vicinity is about ten thousand strong. A battle is looked for soon.

Poor Mr. Cowan.

The New York Herald and the Pittsburgh Post, are both out in the defense and praise of Senator COWAN. If he survives this terrible infliction, he can stand anything. We knew he had fallen—greatly fallen—but, alas, we did not think he had fallen so low.

THERE IS NOTHING NEW UNDER THE SUN.—The carbine with which Hamilton, of Bothwelhaugh, shot the Regent Murray, in 1570, is preserved at Hamilton Palace. It has a brass barrel, the same length as the Enfield rifle, and the bore is the same diameter, and, what is more singular, it is rifled nearly in the same manner as the Enfield. The power of this rifle appears to have been great, for the ball, after passing through the body of the Regent, killed the horse of a gentleman who was riding on the other side.—London Builder.

ON THE RIGHT TACK.—Lovett Morse, Esq., of this town, tack manufacturer, has sent, within a few weeks, no less than six tons of tacks to New Orleans, and yesterday received an order for two tons more.—Taunton Gazette.
