Gen. Fremont's Enterprise.

FREMONT is one of our most dashing generals. In this trait Gen. POPE is the only general we have who equals him. It is said of Gen. POPE, after bringing his army from the Mississippi, to the position before Corinth, the second day, after his arrival, was desirous of permission to make an attack on a certain corps of the rebels that he had already discovered he could attack to advantage. His application was refused by the Commander-in-Chief on the ground that it might bring on a general engagement, and he was not ready for that. Gen. POPE replied—"I have been but two days with my corps, and I am now ready for battle." As if he had said it is strange that an army which has been on the ground for months should not be ready, when I am ready as soon as I arrive, and can find the enemy.

Gen. FREMONT, since he has taken the field, has already fought several battles. When he received orders to cross the mountains and intercept JACKSON, he did not delay to get ready but started immediately, and made an extraordinary march of one hundred miles across the mountains, arriving at Strasburg just too late to intercept JACKSON, whose celerity in escaping was equal to his enterprise in rushing down the valley after BANKS' small army.

Nothing discouraged, and with scarcely any supplies, or means of transportation, FREMONT, notwithstanding the fatigue of his men, followed on after the retreating rebels, harrassing his rear-guard, and frequently compelling him to turn at bay, until his arrival at Harrisonburg, some sixty miles from Strasburg, when JACKSON at last made a stand.

Two fights have taken place. The first was on the 6th, some three miles from Harrisonburg, where a reconnoitering force of our troops was ambushed, and a good many men were lost on both sides—among them the rebel Gen. Ashby, one of the most enterprising and able of the Secesh commanders.

On the 8th, a regular pitched battle was fought, some eight miles from Harrisonburg, lasting some five or six hours, and resulting in a heavy loss on both sides. Our loss is reported at 800, and that of the enemy still greater. FREMONT remained master of the field, and seems by his last dispatch to be expecting another battle, and to be ready to meet the enemy.

There is celerity, dash, boldness, in these movements which have not been excelled during the war, and they have no doubt taught the rebel General that he has either got to fight or desert the valley altogether. It is said that he has refused to leave the Valley while he can keep an army together, so that he must now stand at bay, and try his chances of battle, or lay down his arms.

A Terrible Scene at the Battle of Fair Oaks.

A private letter from a member of the battery of the New York Artillery, in Casey's Division, gives the following graphic account of the memorable attack on that fatal Saturday:

About 11 o'clock (on Saturday, May 31), the enemy sent a couple of six pound balls over into our camp, and immediately commenced the attack by driving in our pickets. Our division was quickly formed in lines of battle; a strong force was sent to support the pickets, and a rifled battery of four guns was ordered up to the right and opened fire. We were all ready for anything that might come, but not for a moment did we dream that we had on our hands one of the most fiercely fought battles that has taken place during the rebellion. The pickets soon began to fire rapidly and came running in; while the infantry posted behind a fence to support them blazed away into the woods. The artillery on our right opened fire and mingled their thunder with the sharp roll of the musketry. Soon our Napoleon guns (three of which were posted in an unfinished redoubt, and three on the left near a rifle pit) opened with case shot which went whizzing through the sky, over the heads of our own men, right into the midst of the enemy, and there exploding scattered death through their ranks. On the left, the rebels were seen coming through the woods to flank us, and wheeling three of our guns as near as to bear upon them, we poured case shot among them with unexampled rapidity and terrible effect.

The destruction was horrible. Our spherical case shot are awful missiles, each of them consisting of a clotted mass of seventy-six musket balls, with a charge of powder in the centre, that is fired by a fuse the same as a shell. The missile first acts as a solid shot, ploughing its way through masses of men, and then exploding hurls forward a shower of musket balls, that mow down the foe in heaps. Our battery threw twenty-four of these a minute, and as we had the exact range of every part of the field, every shot told with frightful effect. But the enemy were not at all daunted.

They marched steadily on, and halted a perfect tempest of balls upon us. Why we, as well as our horses, were not every one shot down will forever remain a mystery to me. We did not mind the leaden hail, however, but kept pouring our case-shot into the dense masses of the foe, who came on in prodigious and overwhelming force. And they fought splendidly, too. Our shot tore their ranks wide open, and shattered them asunder in a manner that was frightful to witness; but they closed up again at once, and came on as steadily as English veterans.

When they got within four hundred yards, we closed our case-shot and opened on them with canister, and such destruction I never elsewhere witnessed. At each discharge great gaps were made in their ranks—indeed, whole companies went down before that murderous fire, but they closed up with an order and discipline that was awe-inspiring. They seemed to be animated with the courage of despair blended with the hope of a speedy victory if they could by an overwhelming rush drive us from our position.

It was awful to see their ranks torn and and shattered by every discharge of canister that we poured right into their faces, and while their dead and dying lay in piles, close up, and still kept advancing right in the face of that fire. At one time three lines, one behind another, were steadily advancing, and three of their flags were brought in range of one of our guns shotted with canister.

"Fire," shouted the gunner, and down went those three flags, and a gap was opened through those three lines as if a thunderbolt had torn through them, and the dead lay in swaths. But they at once closed up and came steadily on, never halting or wavering, right through the woods, over the fence, through the field, right up to our guns, and sweeping everything before them captured every piece.

When we delivered our last fire, they were within fifteen or twenty paces of us, and as all our horses had been killed or wounded, we could not carry off a gun. Our whole division was cut to pieces, with what loss I do not know. We fell back to a second line of intrenchments, and there held the enemy in check till reinforcements arrived, and then we kept our position till night put an end to the battle.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL.

Correspondence of the Pittsburgh Gazette.

WASHINGTON, June 9, 1862.

Various improvements now on foot foretell speedy action where it is most needed and most looked for.

THE 4TH PENNSYLVANIA CAVALRY.

This admirable body is, the most of it, at Fredericksburg. What of it still remains here, is under immediate marching orders. This regiment is, as you know, commanded by Col. Childs, of Pittsburgh. That gentleman I saw here yesterday. He informed me that of the 600 men with him at the Rappahannock, not one was on the sick list. Captain Herron and Capt. Blood, both of Pittsburgh, command companies in the regiment. Late Major Kerr, of Franklin, Venango county, is now Lieutenant-Colonel. The late Captain Covode, son of Hon. John Covode, is promoted to be Major. Late Adjutant B. L. Collart, of Pittsburgh, is now Captain. Colonel Childs is very justly proud of his noble troops who are all strong, enduring men, full of zeal in the cause, well armed, well mounted, and exceedingly proud of their commander, who is justly one of the most popular men in the service. Pittsburgh may well be proud of him.

The regiment has been doing very heavy service where they now are—fighting and hunting guerrillas, and scouting. They had the advanced position of all our force up to the Jackson raid. They were five miles south of the Rappahannock, in camp, and had scouted twenty-five miles south of—I, e.—to within fourteen miles of Hanover Court House, where the right wing of the Union army before Richmond now rests. They did not in all that distance encounter any hostile force, but learned of a body, estimated at 1,800 infantry, with some cavalry and artillery, to the west of the lowest point they reached. Having advanced as far as ordered, they returned with valuable information. Doubtless, but for the sudden blow at Front Royal, and upon Banks, Col. Childs would not now be at Fredericksburg. The whole force there was under immediate marching orders when the falcon struck Winchester. Then the Reserve corps, 20,000 strong, ordered to make the Rappahannock the line for their southern defence, and they therefore fell back. The bridges built over that river, at the point where our troops are, were all carried away by the late rains, but the one built of boats can be speedily relaid, as the material was saved. The wear and tear of war, as all his friends at home, whose name is legion, will be glad to know, agrees admirably with Col. Childs, who is in excellent health and condition. His duties called him here for two days. He returns to-morrow.

THE RESERVE CORPS.

All who know aright in calling this Pennsylvania legion the noblest body of troops in the noble Union army. Their esprit du corps (the nerve of military organization) not only is found in each separate regiment, but pervades the whole body, as a body. I know that the Commander-in-Chief, Gen. McClellan, has long desired to have that phalanx in his forces. Gen. McCall is exceedingly proud of them too, and spoke to me especially of the 56th Regiment as an admirable body of men. The whole body has its marching orders for Tuesday or Wednesday. I could tell where they are going, but it is, of course, better to wait and let the fact come out. We shall hear from them very soon. That body of men can not move any where without making a stir. Where the blows for the cause of truth and freedom fall thickest, there you shall soon hear of the glorious ten thousand.

OUR WOUNDED.

I have, as yet, only been able to get through one of the hospitals here. It may be of interest for your readers to know that the following wounded soldiers from Western Pennsylvania are in the Hospital in Judiciary Square, and speaking from personal observation, I can say are well cared for:

The following from the 62d (Col. Howell) regiment: W. S. Kilgore, Co. I; Martin Pope, Co. F; Thomas K. Fulton, Co. A.

The following is the same hospital are from the 103d (Col. Lehman) regiment: John P. Clark, Co. A; John Price, Co. K; James A. Miller, Co. I; H. Heasley, Co. K; Corporal J. W. Blair, Co. K; Edmund Davis, Co. I; Alex. Keith, Co. F; John Springer, Co. F.

The following from the 61st (Col. Rippey) regiment; Cornelius O'Connor, Co. F; Richard C. Pomeroy, Co. F; Wm. Woodford, Co. F; Walter McCollum, Co. E.

The following from the 63d (Col. Hays) regiment: Corporal Geo. A. Cook, Co. G; Wm. Kaser, Co. B; James Miller, Co. A.

The following from the 105th regiment: Joseph C. Kelso, Co. B; Henry Baughman, Co. E.

Of the 101st regiment the following: John Moore, Co. C; Sam'l H. Jeroldz, Co. B; S. M. Miller, Co. B; A. H. Bitzer, Co. A; Augustus Lightenstar, Co. G; A. J. Mill, Co. D, and Serg't Wm. Thompson, Co. B.

Of the 93d regiment the following: Cyrus Showers, Augustus Dyler, Serg't J. H. Wood, David Gruber—all of Co. K; Chas. Krapenhoft, Co. G; J. J. Rhodes, Co. B.

Of the 102d regiment are T. M. Brown, Co. E; W. H. H. Wasson and R. W. Lyon, Co. H, and of the 104th regiment, Fred. K. Bartleman, Co. A.

I observed, moreover, as having arrived at Fortress Monroe, yesterday, on the steamer Spaulding, the following, who I think are from Penn, Plum and Patton townships:

H. Moffat, Sam'l Stout and S. Sterrait, Co. A, 63d regiment.

Captain Greenwalt, Co. E, 105th regiment, was wounded in the foot. From the ranks—J. J. Armstrong, A. McMath, J. H. Gray and D. C. Palmer, Co. E. A. Cook, of the same company, is reported, as I trust erroneously, to be dead.

I am sure I can repeat for those in Judiciary Square Hospital that they have every care and attention that can be bestowed in any place except at home.

WADE VS. COWAN.

I enclose you the Globe of Friday, containing in full the speech of Senator Wade, in answer to the dog-matics of Mr. Cowan, and the very subdued rejoinder of the latter gentleman, who, at the age of 47, pleads his youth. Mr. Wade's speech, though severe, as you observe, was well received in the Senate, even with a burst of approbation. If you do not publish the debate entire, don't fail to read it. As you will perceive by the perusal of the speech which called out Mr. Wade, since that patriot Jesse D. Bright is no longer in his place to be defended by Mr. Cowan, the latter has turned his exclusive attention to defending the Constitution!

MR. M'KNIGHT ON LIBERIA.

The speech of Mr. McKnight in favor of the recognition of Liberia, was worthy of him, and therein he spoke the sentiments of his noble constituency. It was pitiful to see how vile prejudices dwarfed an intelligent mind like that of Mr. Cox. He attempted to be "dreadful" funny, but I am sure "we couldn't see it," after Mr. M'Knight and Judge Kelly got through with him, and I will do Mr. Cox the credit to say that I don't believe he "sees it" either. Mr. M'K.'s speech, as you will observe, is full of information, as to the history of Liberia and, the action of patriotic Americans in past years touching it. It richly repays a careful perusal. He was warmly congratulated on the conclusion, and the speech was largely subscribed for on the spot.

THE WHITE HOUSE HOSPITAL.

A committee of the House, consisting of Messrs. Sedgwick, McKnight and Dawes, have returned from the tent of war, and after interviews with the President, Secretary of War, Surgeon General, and Sanitary Commissioner, have had several important changes made in regard to the treatment of our wounded. Among other things accomplished, an order has been issued covering the "White House," so justly celebrated as the residence of the rebel Gen. Lee, into an Hospital for our wounded. On the farm attached to these premises there is a spring of pure, limpid water, so rare in that part of Virginia, which must prove highly beneficial to our brave wounded in that swampy vicinity. The Committee will receive the blessing of many a wounded soldier for this addition to our sanitary provisions.

ORGANIZATION OF A MILITARY CAMP OF INSTRUCTION AT ANNAPOLIS.

WASHINGTON, June 9, 1862.

General Order No. 59, just issued is as follows:

A camp of instruction for fifty thousand men—cavalry, artillery and infantry, in due proportions—will be formed immediately near Annapolis, Md. Major General Wool, United States Army, will command the camp, in addition to his duties as Department Commander. The ground will be selected, and the troops, which will be assembled as rapidly as possible, under orders from the War Department, will be placed in position as they arrive. Brigadier General L. P. Graham is assigned to duty as Chief of Cavalry at the camp, and Brevet Brigadier General Harvey Brown as Chief of Artillery, according to his brevet. A Chief of the Infantry arm will hereafter be designated. The Chief of Ordnance, the Quartermaster General, the Commissary General, Surgeon General and Paymaster General will each designate an experienced regular officer as the Chief of their regular department at the camp. These officers will be subject to the orders of Gen. Wool, and, under his supervision, will, without delay, establish a hospital and depots of all the supplies necessary for the health and efficiency of the troops, at points where issues may be conveniently made.

The long experience of the veteran officer assigned to command the camp, will dictate the most efficient details for brigading, drilling, equipping and disciplining the reserve corps d'armee to be thus formed under him. The Chiefs of the different Staff of Bureaux are hereby directed to aid him by promptly meeting his reasonable requisitions for the materials of war.

By order of the SECRETARY OF WAR.
