Resolved, That it is altogether impossible to suppress the existing rebellion so long as such a spirit is allowed to prevail amongst the officers of our army, and that it is absolutely essential, as well to the lives and interests of the soldiery as to the preservation of the Union itself, that the war shall be preservated with such vigor and carnestness as shall bring it to the sarliest possible conclusion; and that no tenderness for slavery or treason—which is only another name, for crueity to freedom and loyalty—shall stay the hand of the Government, and no hesitation or backwardness be shown in removing the causes of this unnatural strife, by so dealing with the traitors and their property, either general or preculiar, in all cases, as the denormity of their crime has deserved, and as will remove as far as practicable the burthen of the war from the shoulders of the patriotic and the innocent.

16. Resolved, That the Hon. David Wilmot, Schator representing Pennsylvanin in the United States Senate, deserves the confidence and thanks of all true friends of the Union, for his consistent, honest and patriotic course; and we hereby declars that Edgar A. This novel, by Mrs. Studdard, has been ashered on the stage amid such a concert of friendly voices attuned to praise, that we feared the high wrought expectations of most readers would not be realized, when the book itself would put them to the test. Perhaps it would have been better to have left the book more to itself—to make its own impression on the public. But when the accomplished authoress—aiready the wife of a poet and the friend of many more—had permitted friendly eyes to explore the secrets of her manuscript, it was vain to hope that they would not praise, even at the risk of depriving all other readers of pleasure like their own—the urannounced pleasure of finding, a good thing unawares. "The Morgesons" is a tale of New England life—aiming rather at the sterner portraiture of possible realities, than that gentle roseate-tinted style of treatment and selection of fairfeatured subjects which best please some artists. It will doubtless become widely popular.

T. J. Haines, U. S. Army. We noticed some time since in the St. Louis Democrat, that this estimable gentleman, accomplished soldier and officer, was promote to the rank of Celonel. We have carefully watched the Washington papers since that and have not had the pleasure of seeing the report confirmed by them, nor have we observed his name amongst those sont in by the President to the Senate.

Col. Haines, formerly of Pennsylvania, by his uniting industry, his thorough business qualifications, and his gentlemantly deportment, has not only condeared himself to the citizens of St. Louis, and elsewhere, where he has had business, but to the government he acrees, he has been a true and faithful servant, "fendering unto them the things that are Casar's." He has, truthfully speaking, displayed great energy and tact in the supervision of the business devolving on him as Chief Commissary of Substatence for the Department, of the Mississippi, in which position he has acted since the early outbreak of the rebellion. We trust, in common with many of his friends and admirror, that the war Department will not divertook the claims of this gallant and worthy officer. The Department woll knows that although millions have passed through his fainds, not a blemsiah mars his character. As tax should be his reward. We trust Secretary Stanton, who, at an carry day, expressed bimself disposed to col. Unine, show that the meritorious and decorving of our army shalt be respected and honored. and have not had the pleasure of seeing the

Mr. Snively, the pastor, observing the doctor, extended the usual courtesy by inviting him to a seat in the pulpit, which was accopted. This gave rise to no little bursing and whispering, and it was evident that many in the congregation din not approve of their pastor thus honoring one who has been charged by a portion of his own people with want of sympathy for the government in its efforts to put down the rebollion. When the doctor, however, was invited to lead; if prayer, many turned their backs upon him forthwith, and left the church, which caused considerable excitement.
