FRIDAY MORNING, JUNE 27.

Protecting the Property of Traitors.

A letter from Nashville, of June 21st, complains most bitterly, that the traitor General Pillow's great plantation is carefully guarded by our soldiers, and all intrusion prevented, while it is cultivated by an overseer and a large number of negroes, and the proceeds doubtless sent to the traitor. Our sick soldiers are crowded into the hot city of Nashville, while his family mansion is kept for the traitor to return to. Recently, a chaplain, and another officer, whose salary would not allow them to be fleeced at the hotels, took possession of an untenanted building, belonging to an absent traitor, but they were immediately ousted by orders from headquarters. At Fredericksburg, and near Richmond, our soldiers are guarding rebel property from intrusion. H. J. Raymond, of the New York Times, says there are twenty houses untouched, as good as the White House, in its immediate neighborhood, while our sick soldiers are sweltering in hot tents.

There is no subject of irritation so potent as this one at this time. The public mind is chafing terribly under this leniency to rebels, and the Government ought to change this policy, or give some good reason for it. The people cannot understand it, and they are impatient under it, while tens of thousands of families are called to mourn over the sickness and deaths of sons, fathers and brothers sent to fight this great rebellion.

Seige of Richmond.

A letter, dated June 21, from Camp Lincoln, gives the following description of Gen. McClellan's siege operations. From this we would infer that McClellan does not intend to bring on a general battle, but to push the rebels back gradually, until their position in front of Richmond is untenable. If a general battle is fought, the rebels must commence the attack, and fight McClellan in his intrenchments:

INTRENCHMENTS.

Three miles length of Gen. McClellan's "first parallel," reaching over hill and through wood, is now already constructed. Its left is protected by an impassable swamp, and the right is gradually being worked in between the rebels and the Chickahominy; though, of course, zigzagging to accommodate, it, its general direction is a curved line, in all parts, about four and a half miles distant from Richmond. The impregnable works are imitated here, and some heavy seige guns will strike terror to the very centre of the enemy's works. Our pickets extend slightly beyond the earthfringe of woods about a half a mile distant. Through openings in this woods, the rebels can distinctly see everything done on the Federal embankment, and within a week their sharpshooters have picked off many a soldier, whose imprudence in exposing himself to sight cost him his life. The siege of Richmond will be conducted on true scientific principles, and its fall, though it may not be speedy, will be sure. Every life will be spared that can be by any possibility, and though the Federal positions will be such that, after in each victory is secured, not few will have to deplore the waste of blood which gained it.

THE CASE OF DR. HAYS.—The report, to which one of our cotemporaries gives currency, that Dr. Hays, who was recently dismissed from the service for neglect of the sick and wounded with whose care he was charged, will be reinstated, is, at present, at least, without foundation. There is reason to believe that the Committee on the Conduct of the War have as yet received no testimony tending to show that Secretary Stanton was unduly harsh in his treatment of Dr. Hays, and that no satisfactory explanation has yet been given them of his course in taking his supper before going to seek the Surgeon General, or in leaving his charge to go bed.

GETTING MILDER.—The Richmond Dispatch, the most enterprising newspaper in the South, comes out now printed on a half sheet, with a standing apology under the editorial head. The papers are not near so bitter as formerly. The rebels are sorely puzzled over General McClellan's movements, and affect a sort of nonchalance about it by making sport of his snail-like movements.

The news of the occupation of Cumberland Gap by Gen. Morgan, and Chattanooga by Gen. Mitchell, causes great apprehensions for the safety of the Cotton States as a place of final retreat.

THE MEDICAL ENCAMPMENT.—The grand encampment at Fairfax Seminary, under the charge of Assistant Surgeon Armstrong, U. S. A., has been enlarged, by an order from Surgeon General Hammond, so as to accommodate 4,500 patients, including attendants. The convalescents from Clifftburn Hospital and the post hospital of Hospital Church, are being removed to the convalescent camp at Fairfax Seminary. The Baptist, Episcopal, Methodist and Presbyterian churches at Falls Church are now occupied as Government hospitals. The patients there number 583.

GEN. BLENKER, and his staff, have been removed from any command. General CARL SCHURTZ takes his place, and will endeavor to bring BLENKER'S old division into some order. It is said the conduct of BLENKER'S men has been outrageous, and that their conduct on the field of battle was not creditable. As the Germans have every where else fought well, the cause of their defeat in this case must be attributed to the officers. It is reported that Gen. FREMONT became so indignant with BLENKER that he tore off his shoulder strap, and broke his sword.

MEDICAL DIRECTOR.—Assistant Surgeon Charles Page, U. S. A., has been appointed Medical Director, in place of Assistant Surgeon Jonathan Letterman, who is ordered to caused by the retiring of Surgeon Charles S. Tripler, U. S. A. It is thought that this change will do away with the trouble and mistakes so long incident to the sending of sick and wounded from Gen. McClellan's division to the Washington hospitals.

GEN. C. M. REED, of Erie, has authorized the construction of thirty new canal boats, to supply the increasing demands of transportation on the Erie Extension Canal.

OUR ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

From Gen. McClellan's Army.

FAIR OAKS, Va., June 19, 1862.

The plot thickens; the play goes on, and the day is not far distant when the last act of this great national drama of Rebellion vs. Law and Order will be performed, and the curtain descend on a once more united and peaceful country, amid the plaudits of the civilized world. Each day, though the army of the Potomac is lying apparently inactive, the rebels are being whipped, worse—aye, ten times worse—than if fighting. They know it, too, and though anxious to have the battle fought which is to decide their fate, are not particular about attacking us. Their experiment on May 31st convinced them of the imprudence of such a step. To compel us to attack them, however, they are continually making extensive demonstrations in our front, and skirmishing with the pickets. This, however, creates no alarm, owing to the extraordinary strength of the guard. The pickets are stationed not more than a dozen yards apart. Behind each man is a post of three or four, and behind all, not more than five hundred yards, is the reserve—an entire brigade. Thus, you see, the pickets form a force of not less than six thousand men, equal to the number of men in Casey's division, the day of the fight.

Rumors are in circulation, relative to the reduction of Fort Darling, by the combined attacks of the James river. At the White House, the report was that Burnside had been ordered by advance on the fort, and early yesterday morning, heavy cannonading was heard in that direction gave rise to the rumor that Fort Darling was being bombarded, which later in the day, gave rise into a reduction of the place.

Yesterday the enemy made somewhat of an alarming demonstration in front of our left wing. Skirmishers advanced on our pickets, supported by large bodies of infantry, with cavalry and artillery. Our pickets immediately opened fire on them and for a time the firing was very sharp. As the enemy approached within range, our battery of Napoleons opened on them, and, in the language of one of the pickets, "the 'rebs' soon skedaddled." In the three months' campaign such an affair would have been honored with the name of a battle, but they are of too common occurrence here that they excite very little attention, and the men go about their duty as if a thousand miles from the vicinity of any enemy.

Day before yesterday a deserter from the Sixth Alabama came into our lines with the important information that Jackson was to be reinforced from the army at Richmond, by fifteen thousand men. His regiment was to be one of the number, and he took this opportunity of making his escape to our army.

The Pennsylvania Reserves are here, encamped on the other side of the Chickahominy. They have not yet received orders, but have been reviewed by Gen. McClellan, and will soon receive their station. This corps is a valuable acquisition to the army of the Potomac. They have had large experience in the art of war, and during the past year have been constantly in the most active service. They had some little experience in fighting, too, and will, no doubt, prove themselves worthy of the name, and sustain the honor of Pennsylvania soldiers.

Some fears have been entertained of an attack on this portion of the lines to-day, but probably it will end as the rumors generally do—in smoke.

June 20th.—Yesterday, after getting thus far in my letter, I heard that news of importance in regard to certain matters of interest might be obtained at the White House, and accordingly I immediately started for that place. On my arrival I discovered that the said news was "contraband," and, of course, I am not permitted to relate it. This I can say, however, that movements are on foot that will have an important bearing on the result of the fight to come off at this place.

White House Landing has become already a place of considerable notoriety. From a little "one-horse" hamlet it has grown to the importance of a town of some size. Here are to be seen everything usually to be found in cities. Stores, warehouses, streets, laborers, shipping, etc., with all the warlike preparations common to an army storehouse. Large and comfortable houses are in course of construction for the accommodation of laborers employed by the Government, of whom there are about two thousand, the number being nearly equally divided between whites and negroes. Long row of large tents, around the door of each a crowd of soldiers, showed me at once the location of the sutlers. These are the most perfect establishments of the kind that I have seen since leaving Washington. Everything that might be wished for by the hungry soldiers longing for something "fit to eat" is to be found here. Many of the most enterprising storekeepers have large bakeries attached to their tents, and turn out great quantities of bread, pies, cakes, etc., all of which are bought up eagerly immediately on leaving the oven. The prettiest feature of this tented city, however, is the hospital, comprising several hundred wall tents, on a gentle rise, formed into regular streets, and making as pretty a picture as a soldier would wish to see. Everything here bears an air of neatness that is pleasant to look upon, after for months being used to nothing but the dust, turmoil and dirtiness of ordinary camp life.

From some of the dwellers here, I heard that the most intense excitement prevailed among the sutlers on the receipt of the news about the raid made upon the railroad by the rebels. Many even went so far as to pay the most extravagant prices for stowing away their goods in the holds of certain vessels then lying in the harbor. But the rapid pursuit of the rebels by our cavalry somewhat restored their confidence, and the next morning all was quiet. Unless the marauders have, ere this, arrived within the lines of the rebel army, they are likely to fall into considerable trouble, for strong parties are in search of them. The Third Pennsylvania cavalry started in pursuit on Monday morning, and has not yet returned, so it is safe to presume that they have obtained some clue to their whereabouts. The party has been discovered to be much larger than was at first supposed. It is estimated by some to number fifteen hundred, but by some who were taken prisoners and subsequently escaped, I have learned that they did not exceed six hundred. Indeed, the great necessity that existed for rapidity of movement interfered with the possibility of having a larger force, or of bringing artillery. If Col. Lee had any artillery with his command, he would certainly have used it on the train, instead of relying on the carbines of his soldiers. Precautionary measures have been taken that will render it almost impossible for the like occurrence to take place again, and Col. Lee will find himself snapped up if he undertakes to commit another depredation of like character. Other guerrillas are known to be in our rear, and have been seen lately on the opposite side of the river, casting wishful eyes on the wealth of goods displayed before them. These parties are not strong enough, however, to do any great damage, and no notice is taken of them. Several farmers, loud in their asseverations of devotion to the Union, have been arrested; it having been proved that they have furnished information to the enemy.

Yesterday I had for companions on the cars a number of wounded soldiers, and on entering into conversation with one, learned that they belonged to the Sixteenth Massachusetts, and had been wounded in the skirmish mentioned above. Their Brigade (the first of Hooker's Division) had been detailed for picket, and had just taken position when the enemy appeared in front. The Sixteenth was sent out to reconnoitre, and a brisk skirmish ensued. As stated above, the enemy were driven off by our battery, and the Sixteenth withdrew, with a loss of fifty-two in killed and wounded. This is one of the new regiments that has been luxuriating at Fortress Monroe for a year past. Their first experiences is rather severe.

The Reserves have moved to the front. They were reviewed by Gen. McClellan on the 17th, and immediately received orders to proceed to the front. They will make their mark.

The 98th Pa., for some time detailed to support a regiment of cavalry in Stoneman's Division, has returned to the Brigade. They express themselves as heartily glad of the change. They were detailed at Williamsburg, May 7th, and since that time have been continually on the move. For three weeks they marched every day—sometimes marching all day and camping a single mile from the starting point.

They report everything quiet on the right save the usual skirmishing between the pickets. No movement of importance has taken place.

The dead on the field at Fair Oaks have all been buried. The graves of our own boys are each marked, and in many instances are protected by stakes driven around them. Many rebel graves have been nicely smoothed and rounded off by our boys, and a stick set in at their head with the single word "Rebel" written thereon. Expressive, isn't it? Some kind-hearted fellow had buried two rebels a rude cross, put it at their head. But this would not do; they must have an epitaph. A piece of paper was stuck on the cross with these words: "2 rebles, killed in battle, May 31, 1862. If money would bye, the rich would live and the poore would dye."

Heavy firing has commenced in front, and I must discover the cause. G.
