Valley of the rebels. The President has just ncted wisely in giving the command to one change.

The following speculations on the subject of the army of the Valley, is from the Washington correspondence of the New York Evening Post, and were written before the change was announced:

It is no longer a secret that the army of the Potomac has been reinforced. Nor i it a secret that the national troops protecting Washington and the Valley of the Shenandoah have fallen back, abondoning a splendid grain-growing region of country to the rebels. It is well known that there to the rebels. It is well known that there is not a General in the country, who is not on the Peninsula, who considers it safe to detach another man from this vicinity. Gen. Pope, who has had a long consultation with the War Department, does not hesitate to say that it would be too great a risk to send off any more regiments from the army now guarding the Potomac line. There is a good deal of speculation in reference to the destination of Gen. Pope. There can be no doubt that he goes into the Valley, but how the conflicting claims of the Generals in command there are to be f the Generals in command there are to be harmonized cannot be seen as yet. There or merely for consultation with the govern-ment. He comes for a distinct purpose, which will soon be announced. It is probable that the President has done the wisest thing he could do, under the circumstances, and no one can doubt his kindness and singleness of heart, or

During the debate on the Confiscation bill in the Senate, on Wednesday, Mr. Browning and Mr. Dixon, took the ground that Congress could do but little, being so tied up by the Constitution, while the President, under the War Power, could do great deal. This brought out old Ben. Wade, who said:

Mr. Wade (Ohio) said he would not sit The Power of Congress.

Mr. Wade (Ohio) said he would not sit skill and have the country suppose that he sgreed in any way to the miserable and slavish doctrines he had heard here to-day. that the President in time of war was vested with supreme powers, and nobody has any control over him at all. He was not going to submit to any such hideous deterine as that Traitors might make war to overthrow the government, and Congress had no power at all. Senators had spoken here by the try, claiming that the President was en-ly uncontrolled. Congress made all-icles of war and rules for the commander-in-chief. Congress could take away the army from the President and make peace, inere was war being carried on as there is now, when men guard the property of rebels with one hand and fight them with the other. No rebel was ever brought back by leniency. He referred to the order of Gen.

MeDowell of May 26 direction of Warrant—extends clear over to the leniency. other. No repet was ever brought once of leniency. He referred to the order of Gen. McDowell, of May 26, directing an officer to guard the property of one Hoffman, even if it took soldiers for every panel of the fence. He had been told that this Hoffman was as arrant a traitor as ever lived. He thought men who were sedulous in guarding the property of rebels were not likely to fight them very hard. He (Wade) had sworn to protect the Constitution, and be faithful to the oath when actively prosecuting the war. He would prosecute the war against the enemies of the Constitution though every slave was freed and every cent of property taken from the rebels. The Southern trai-tors may as well know that if they cannot consent to be equals they must become vassals, for the North will never submit to be slaves.

The English Parliament. Both lords and commoners in England have made themselves very ridiculous in their engerness to cast reproach upon Gen. Butler, and the government, whose officer he is. In the House of Lords, Earl Carnounced that "such a proclamation, addressed to a force which had just captured man jushed the case through, and, thanks a hastile city, was likely to lead to great to his energy and the fact that a just judge brutality." In the House of Commons the Ballard—tried the case, the man has esinevitable Mr. Gregory saw in the order such a horrible thing that Great Britain know the real nature and salutary effects of the order in question. puts the case thus:

No fair man who knows how universal, perastrent, outrageous, have been the studied insults offered to our Union soldiers by the hooped secessionists, will pronounce that or derone whit too severe. The she rebels have presumed upon their pettleoats to treat our volunteers as no decent dog ever deserved to be treated. The cowarder of these insults is but one element of their bestleoats. General Butter found it necessary to protect his soldiers from this wanton, degrading abuse, or enfler them to protect themselves. So he issued an order that women who in the public streats insulted his soldiers should be treated like the street walkers, whose manners they imitated—that is, should be taken to the calabone and locked up, with other disorderly persons. This order did its work. Nobody has been harmed under it—no one arrested—but the she seem of New Orleans dried up at once. They have incurred no penalties, for they have committed no offense. Their city has been quiet as a church ever since it was issued—more so then for years before Gen. Batter took charge of it—and a good understanding between its people and his forces is steadily differing itself. If Lord Palmerston and his set will simply mind their own business. and his set will simply mind their own business, the women of New Orleans will be well cared for, and the Union will be restored.

the Valley of Virginia, and to defend Washington, although it is said that Gen. Pope is also to operate against Richmond. Gen. Pope has proved himself an enterprising and gallant soldier, and we have no doubt that he will, with so fine an army at his command, be able soon to rid the Valley of the rebels. The President has ice imprisoned and sold.

A divided command has worked badly, and it was not too soon to make the enemy, tell into our hands, and were, of course, free by the act of Cangress passed and approved on August 6th, 1861. Thirty-two of these men were turned over to Cap-tain W. W. Leland, Chief Commissary of the army of Tennesse : others were turne over to the Quartermaster of the force over to the Quarternaster of the forces. They were employed by these officers, and, we are assured, proved themselves faithful, intelligent, hard-working fellows.
Captain Leland issued "free passes" to those he had charge of; and the following is a copy of the free paper of Edward Trotter:

of Tennessee.
Trotter was, after a while engaged by Capt. Leland as his body servant, allowed o him by military regulations. In this capacity he accompanied him to Pittsburgh Landing, and after the battle of Shiloh, Capt. Leland having occasion to send a horse to this city which had been in the action, got leave from Gen. Grant to dispatch Trotter to New York with him. The man was furnished with a pass from Gen. Grant, one from Capt. Leland, and his free papers, and set out for the East, by way of St. Louis, Louisville and Pittsburgh. At St. Louis he was not troubled; but when the steamboat in which he was pass-ing up the Ohio to Pittsburgh, arrived op-posite Louisville, a police agent was sent on board by C. L. When Captain Leland heard that his servant had been arrested in Louisville, he was on sick leave, on his way home to this city. He stopped at Louisville and determined to release him. He applied to the Provost Marshal, who declined to interfere. He went next to the Chief of Police, who refused point blank to let the man go.
