FRIDAY MORNING, JULY 4.

No PAPER will be issued from this office tomorrow morning, but our Evening edition will appear as usual. The Crisis -- What Shall be Done? that the slaveholders' rebellion is of a most resolute and determined character, and that it comprehends so large a portion of the people of the insurrectionary States, that it may be said to be the act of those States. Especially is the slaveholding population the advantages which the unrequited labor the sympathy and commendation of man of the slaves gives them, to destroy the kind. The only official persons mentioned Union, and set up for themselves a great with commendation are named in the folslaveholding aristocratic government. Is it not, then, high time to change the Loyal Southern men hold these views, and express them openly, and why then should the Govsitate? Mr. Brownlow, in his lete lecture at Washington struck a cord which vibrales in every loyal heart in this country. On this point he said: 'This country is now pursuing a course with this infernal wicked rebellion which I do not mendous applause at the end of the sentence gave good evidence that there is a large with the parson. He returned to this point

Jefferson Davis was Charles Sumner," was greeted with numeric enthanisam by the sudience. "God dan his soul," the sudience. "God dan his soul," the sudience "God dan his soul," the sudience "God dan his soul," the sudience "God dan his soul," the "Garden sum white House to Gen. McClellan's head found be hung after. Abolition sunk," and other characteristic expressions met our ear spot its platform, but to what extent such indersement was carried in the sudience we cannot say. As a whole, Mr. Duer was a fallure, and succeeded only in keeping his audience in good humor by speaking against Senator, Lane, Bev. Dr. Type whom he called a "poor Christian," Herroe Greeley, and other humble clissens, in such terms as, made the hardened features of his hearers relax into broad grimnecs, and their muscular arms swing, raptirously in the lar.

Mr. James Brooks was an unwelcome speaker. The sudience didn't want him, and manifested that feeling very plainly, so that Mr. James Brooks had a very many stores commaned; and was hurried forward with the utnost vigor. Is it not high time the campaigns; and for that calm self-pos-that we show the rebels that longer for-bearance will not be granted, and that we base attacks of Abolitionists while he has bravely fought the enemy under great ob-stacles; and to Gen. Halleck, for his bril-liant successes; that our armies are noten-listed in any other cause than that of the Constitution and the Union; and that the allegation of the Abolitionists that the sol-diers of New York, or of the country, are fighting for negro freedom, or negro equal-ity, dishonors as good and brave men as the sun ever shone upon. Nobody, but such slanderers as those who endorse such a resolution, ever said that the soldiers are fighting for "negro freeapprove of, unless we pursue a different dom" or "negro equality," but hundreds was in the direction of White House Landing and a more vigorous one we shall never end of thousands of true patriots do say that this rebellion in God's world!" Is it right for the Government to put the patriculum of the people to so severe a strain, when it can say the word which will fall pour our regiments, and send hundreds of thousands more into the field.

The people hays fails in, the President, in the President, they from the propose hays fails that word, which is the propose hays fail to the propose hays fails that word, which will electrify the nation, and thus which will electrify the nation, and the short of the nation of the people hays fail to the control of high conditions.

The people hays fails a the fail thus of pickers, or any of the people hays fail to the control of the people hays fail to t which will electrify the nation, and thus commence the real beginning of the end of the great rebellion. May God in his Providence direct him aright. He has on his shoulders an awful responsibility. He can save the nation, and put it on a career of unparalleled prosperity, or he may leave the broken, disheartened, and a prey to intestine dissensions, and endless wars.

We feel as well assured, as that we must destroy breath the vital sir, that we must destroy not the slaveholding sristocratic institutions of the South, or the nation must sink into hopeless and premature decay. We plead for white men, not the blacks. The latter will work out their own deliverance in the long run, but it may be over the rains and enders and the order excluding newspaper correspondents from the south or the rains of the South, or the nation must sink into hopeless and premature decay. He has no faith whatever in the "conciliatory policy," for the reson that, he says, he knows that the rebells are determined not to be conciliated. They will only give up to actual brute force.

Every loyal man of sense must come to the same conclusion. How long are we to go on wasting our treasure, and sacrificing the lives of our citizens, while werefuse to touch the source of the chief strength of the rebellion:

The President asks for three hundred thousand more men. The people will respond because it is the country which demands it, and the life of the nation is at stake; but with how much more cheerfulness would this response be made, if the President would couple with it the selemn declaration that hereafter slavery what have no quarter, and that our Generals because the rebells are of concernation of the country which demands it, and the life of the nation is at stake; but with how much more cheerfulness would not come from the natural consequence.
