The stamboat Ariel brought Brig. General Andrew Porter and Brig. General Naglee to Washington on Sunday night. Both of them were sick, and Gen. McClelian thought they would be benefited by the change. General Porter was entrusted with important dispatches for the War Department. After they were delivered, on Monday morning the President determined to go to the army, and the Ariel was detailed to convey him. He left on Monday afternoon, and must have reached Harrison's Landing yesterday forenoon, unless he made a stop at Fortress Monroe. Gen.
