"life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." If the editor of the Post is in favor of this, let him come out and say so like a man, or else forever give up the name of a Democrat, or even a man of justice.

Moreover, we consider a black slave, who is willing to give all the powers that God has given him, and all that he has been permitted to derive from education in a state of slavery, to the service of the Government for the overthrow of this rebellion a more loyal man, and more worthy to be trusted than an editor with the words of patrictism on his lips, who does all in his power to depreciate the patriotism and services of the great majority of Congress and the people of the loyal States.

se are not times to mince matters. He that is not for the country is against it. The editor who daily slanders the men who elected Mr. Lincoln President, and whose loyalty has not been, and cannot be, called in question, who with all their powers, and with the sacrifice of their lives and fortunes, are sustaining the Government in this terrible crisis, is a dangerous member of society, and is worse than an open rebel.

Gen. Lane, of Kansas. Congress and the Administration having at last adopted the true policy for crushing the rebellion, the next important step is to select the man to execute it. If we can judge correctly of public sentiment by the speeches of important men, and by the tone of the press, the eye of the country is turning in one direction. As a single illustration of this we copy the following from the tion of this we copy the following from the Leavenworth Conservative, the editor of which knows whereof he speaks. The country has not forgotten that Gen. Lane, by his indomnitable pluck and hardihood, changed the fortunes of Buena Vista from when the state is the state of the speaks. The state is in the constitution and the laws; to the state to their allegiance. These are good words. But what meat is in them? Every child knows that to end this war involves other questions than merely these of military strategy. Leavenworth Conservative, the editor of b which knows whereof he speaks. The country has not forgotten that Gen. Lane, by his indomnitable pluck and hardihood, changed the fortunes of Buena Vista from a disastrons defeat to a glorious victory; a disastrons defeat to a glorious victory; and military skill, he saved Kansasto freedom, although he contended against the gigantic power of the General Government, backed by the whole force of the slave States. As the representative of the new policy, he is universally popular, and has the constitution and the laws; to bring back the States to their allegiance. These save good words. But what meat is in them? Every child knows that to end this war invites of the cutty, however, has done General Butler's firm, prudent and wise Government of the city, however, has done Government of the city, however, has done of the common people. Even those who hat his presence are forced to admire his presence are forced to admire his to concerned in the ending of the war as is the short of such the second General Jackson. What Unionists (white) are here, I think, will be large the vict. For myself, I regard him as a second General Jackson. What Unionists (white) are here, I think, will be large the vict. College the briate, Europe of such; the common people. Even those who hat his presence are forced to admire his to reason. What Unionists (white) are here, I think, will be a clearly on the city as soon as the river is opened, simply to avoid starvation, if for nothing else. Flour is $25 a barrel, and the lock of the new made of this necessary of life from the policy, he is universally popular, and has blockaded. When that is done, our supplies are cut off and our army placed in a state of siege. Gen. McClellan occupies one little spot on the Peninsula, holds it by virtue of gunboats, and does not seem to know what is going on elsewhere. The papers speak as if he had no notion of moving within a month. Is there not danger of intervention before that time alarsas?

danger of intervention before that time elapses?

We believe there is only one man in the country who has the military genius to lead that army against all obstacles into Richmond, and that man is Gen. James H. Iana. He has every quality of mind and character which belonged to the historical commanders; he inspires soldiers with boundless enthusiasm; he always knows the exact position and strength of the enemy, and the enemy never knows either his power or purposes. There are no obstacles in his path and to him a difficulty is simply a thing to be overcome.

He has had more military experience than Geo B. McClellan, and is his superior in

Geo. B. McClellan, and is his superior in intellectual power and resources.

Put Jim Lane in command of our armies and there will be no talk about drafting, no difficulty in getting recruits, no depreciation of the national currency.

It will give confidence to the whole country, and instead of months of fatal idleness accountability, and things will go on betwee shall have victories every day, and a restored Union within five months.—Leavether the people's government, and if it is in-

The news we give elsewhere from the Lower Mississippi, comes through rebel sources, but is of a nature to cause grave anxiety, even after reasonable descenat has anxiety, even after reasonable descent has been made. That some reverse serious in itself, if not detailing further serious re sults, has been sustained by our fleet above Vicksburg, there is reason to apprehend, weakened as the account is by statements. Webster's words are "Industry and Union, and Uni utterly incredible. From the same rebel source, we have news from Richmond that the daring rebel cavalry leader, Gen. McClellan's lines and from the north bank of the James river below our army, and opened fire on our fleet with disaster to the latter. This, coupled with the dispatch announcing the concentration of the robel army south of the James river, and the statement of anxieties felt at Washington as to possible movements, constitute no cheerful picture. The work of enlightening our government and the people as to the task set before us is going on very fast. From President to people, among men of all parties, in our streets and throughout the country, it has stood confessed that the time might, come when a decree of universal

States. As the representative of the new policy, he is universally popular, and has the entire confidence of the great and moving power of the country, and he can to-day rally more men to his standard than any General in the field. Why, then, we ask, is he not the man for the present crisis?

Affairs on the James river look anything but favorably. Our boats are constantly fired into, and the river can be easily blockaded. When that is done, our supplies are cut off and our samy placed in a state of siege. Gen.
