THURSDAY MORNING, JULY 24.

OUR GREAT WAR MEETING.

This afternoon the people hold their Council on the West Commons, Allegheny. They meet at a moment of intense anxiety, when wast interests are at stake, and when the fate of this nation is the question for consideration. The immediate object of the meeting is to promote enlistments, and to pledge our lives and property to the service of following extract from a letter of "Occaour country. Let there be unanimity in this sional" work. Let one half-day be given to a cause which comprehends in its results all days, all earthly interests, for what is life or property, without a country whose honor is untarnished, whose name is respected, whose power is unquestioned, and which can secure liberty, pasce, and security to all its citizens. Come, then, one and all. Let there be no laggards, no selfish indifferentism. Allegheny county

Gov. Morcan did right, and we exceedingly regret that Gov. Guarin did not assume-a like responsibility for this State, or 8 that he did not call upon the Legislatur for its sanction to such a wise appropria tion. The attempt to raise money by individual benevolence will, we fear, fail; and such a mode of raising money or such a purpose is manifestly unjust. The patriotic and unselfish will respond to the extent of their means, or beyond their means, while others equally able, or more able will, on one subterfuge or another, shut ur equally upon all in proportion to their ability—the selfish as well as the patriotic

Some friends write to urge us to resume the free and fearless criticism of Military movements. We cannot do it. We might in some cases expose a blunder or help to deprive an incompetent commander of the power to do further mischief; but we abould oftener fail in the attempt, and then power to do further mischief, but we should oftener fail in the attempt, and then be accused of causing the very disasters we had done our tumost to avert. For instance, it is now as well established as any truth can be so long as a single human being has an interest in denying it, that the fatal mistake of our Military directors last year was that of delaying too long and, excetting irresolutely their offensive movement. Had our soldiers as they reached Washington been brigaded, drilled to field movements, massed in a single army, and, so early as the list of June, pushed straight upon Richmond, it is a moral impossibility that they should not have taken that city before the 4th of July. All this we urged, for this we exhorted, expostutated, entreated—all in vain. Our Volunteers were left to waste precious weeks in idleness and dissipation in and about Washington; and when at length our Lieutenant-General was fairly driven to order an advance for which he had made no adequate preparations, and which was weeks in idleness and dissipation in and about Washington; and when at length our Lieutenant-General was fairly driven to order an advance for which he had made no adequate preparations, and which was utterly argument to his feelings and tiews, our army was sent forward in two corps, wholly independent of each other, and with such delays and mismanagement that all the Rebel strength in Virginia was attacked by a third of ours, with the inevitable result. Every single element of this table result. Every single element of this most needless disaster—the long, debauching idleness in Washington—the needless delay after crossing—the fatal division of our forces—was exactly what we had striven value to prevent and yet every traitor in the Free States at once asserted, and most of the fools for a time believed; or affected to believe, that the movement on Manassas had been made in obedience to the dicitate of the Tribune! We do not forget the lesson—N. F. Tribune.

The editor of the Tribune never did a The editor of the Tribune never did a more foolish or deplorable thing, than when he yielded to the howlings of his enemies after the disaster at Bull Run, and shnegated his true position as an independent editor; and the above reasons for continuing his weak policy are no better than those given for the first departure from his confidence and the respect of the public, which admits that it yields its just rights, and lays aside its imperative duties, because the right course is unpopular. A generous public will hear with an honest difference of opinion, stoutly and sincerely persisted in, while confidence will soon wither and die, when an editor yields his convictions to any amount of public obloquy. The Tribuse is generally right, and it has the Tribune is generally right, and it has the good wishes of thousands who are grievedat this painful manifestation of weakness.

Gen. Halleck will have a most interesting field upon which to operate here, especially in view of the fact that we are to have a more determined general policy against the rehels. Gen. A DISEASES OF THE THROAT AND LUNGS, CATARRH, BORE THROAT, BRONOSHIIS, ASTHMA, CONSUMPTION.—I take this means to inform the public, and all those patients suffering from diseases of the THROAT AND LUNGS, that I have arrived at Pitaburgh and taken rooms at the RONOSHAHELA ROUSE, where I may be consulted for a limited time in regard to Bronchitts, Asthma, Consumption—diseases which are to stately interesting to a large perturn it mankind, and evidentity or ide increase in the United which have been assumed that the control that correct ideas should rise for, it is descended that correct ideas should rise for, it is descended that correct ideas should rise for, it is descended that correct ideas should rise for the formal them.

We know that in all diseases a timely application of rational remedies is more than half the battle, and the aphorium which teaches that 'prevention is better than a sure," applies with poculiar forms to the case of Consumption, which, if cores graing established, rarely, if ever, gives way, even to the most skilleful treatment and the most sections care.

Let all, therefore, who have reason to apprehend the avidence of the seeds of the disease (Perritions Diathesia,) in themselves or their children, not fall to obtain quech saltery avives, with reference to the regulation of their diet, and the preservation of their beauth, as my long suprenone canables me to give tham.
