

The Noble General Rousseau, at Hurler's, North Alabama. A letter from his camp, dated July 22d, to the Cincinnati Gazette, says:

I know of nothing so encouraging as the manner in which Gen. Rousseau is beginning to deal with the traitors in North Alabama. For the past few days I have been diligently watching the effect of his course, and upon the army and the sickly soldiers were furnished to go home, and there they remain. Some of them may be well now, but many of them probably are not, and the declaration remains equally true, nevertheless, that the amazing reduction in the strength of this great army was originally caused by the frightful amount of sickness which kept them for months in malarious swamps and under a burning Southern sun brought on. Then the losses, which would rise to many thousands, and the whole losses in prisoners have never been acknowledged.

Senator Chandler was entirely correct in stating the facts that were given by McClellan, to execute his plan for the taking of Richmond. If the General employed them without accomplishing his object, he would not be held responsible for the change of policy and the change of command of the army, on which the President was resolved?

The Census of Scotland. The census of Scotland has just been completed, and gives many interesting items of information. There are 2,071,000 people in Scotland, taking as the basis of the census the population of the United Kingdom on the 1st of April, 1870. The population in 1861 was 1,812,000. The increase in the population of Scotland in 1870 was 259,000. The population of Scotland in 1870 was 2,071,000. The population of Scotland in 1861 was 1,812,000. The increase in the population of Scotland in 1870 was 259,000.

It requires much less effort to tell what has become of it, than to devise the means of rescuing it from its perilous situation. Mr. Stewart tells above what has become of it, and that the whole loyal people of the States have mourned over its destruction, and have come to a fair conclusion as to the causes of its disaster.

But who is responsible? That is a question which the people desire to have answered. They are not to be put off by descriptions of "military strategy," and sections of "Napoleonic generalship." They look at results. What have they for their labor and sacrifices? An army diminished by one-half and so belaguered with no other retreat, which it embarked upon at Washington, it is now more remote from success than ever, and it is no longer a question so much of success as of safety.

The Philadelphia North American presents us with the following summary of English views on the campaign on the Peninsula:

The London Times' American correspondent comments upon these hazy items this week. One of them ("London") says that from Hill's plantation, on the Pamunkey river, he describes the camps around him as "wretched and filthy looking shanty and disorderly." He says he believes that Gen. McClellan's division, this belief is founded on private reports of the battle, from which it would appear that the division fought very well, considering the inexperience of the troops; but the tales about bayonet charges were ridiculous, for out of all the wounded there was but one injured by a bayonet.

The writer expresses his opinions very strongly. He greatly admires the courage and resignation of the brave volunteers, and says they are up to the mark in their ignorance and ignorance on the part of their generals which no European army would stand without rebuke. He emphatically condemns Gen. McClellan's division, and says he is losing more men by them than he would by storing his arms and felicitate works. We extract his words:

It was whispered here for months that the horribly unhealthy localities at York, Pennsylvania, had cost the life of Gen. McClellan, but that was not the case. It was the cholera which was the cause of his death, and it was the cholera which was the cause of his death.

It was whispered here for months that the horribly unhealthy localities at York, Pennsylvania, had cost the life of Gen. McClellan, but that was not the case. It was the cholera which was the cause of his death, and it was the cholera which was the cause of his death.

It was whispered here for months that the horribly unhealthy localities at York, Pennsylvania, had cost the life of Gen. McClellan, but that was not the case. It was the cholera which was the cause of his death, and it was the cholera which was the cause of his death.

It was whispered here for months that the horribly unhealthy localities at York, Pennsylvania, had cost the life of Gen. McClellan, but that was not the case. It was the cholera which was the cause of his death, and it was the cholera which was the cause of his death.

It was whispered here for months that the horribly unhealthy localities at York, Pennsylvania, had cost the life of Gen. McClellan, but that was not the case. It was the cholera which was the cause of his death, and it was the cholera which was the cause of his death.

It was whispered here for months that the horribly unhealthy localities at York, Pennsylvania, had cost the life of Gen. McClellan, but that was not the case. It was the cholera which was the cause of his death, and it was the cholera which was the cause of his death.

It was whispered here for months that the horribly unhealthy localities at York, Pennsylvania, had cost the life of Gen. McClellan, but that was not the case. It was the cholera which was the cause of his death, and it was the cholera which was the cause of his death.

It was whispered here for months that the horribly unhealthy localities at York, Pennsylvania, had cost the life of Gen. McClellan, but that was not the case. It was the cholera which was the cause of his death, and it was the cholera which was the cause of his death.

It was whispered here for months that the horribly unhealthy localities at York, Pennsylvania, had cost the life of Gen. McClellan, but that was not the case. It was the cholera which was the cause of his death, and it was the cholera which was the cause of his death.

PUBLIC NOTICES.
LECTURES AT THE IRON CITY...
DESTRUCTION OF THE IRON CITY...
COSTAR'S RAT, ROACH, & CO.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.
DESTRUCTION OF THE IRON CITY...
COSTAR'S RAT, ROACH, & CO.

DRY GOODS.
SUMMER GOODS...
Reduced Prices.

W. & D. HUGUS.
SALE EXTRAORDINARY...
J.W. Barker & Co's.

J.M. Burchfield's.
Selling without regard to cost...
LACE MANTILLAS...

MANUFACTURERS OF
Lead Pipe, Sheet Lead, and Bar Lead...
McCORMICK, GIBSON & CO.

MANUFACTURERS OF
Lead Pipe, Sheet Lead, and Bar Lead...
McCORMICK, GIBSON & CO.

MANUFACTURERS OF
Lead Pipe, Sheet Lead, and Bar Lead...
McCORMICK, GIBSON & CO.

MANUFACTURERS OF
Lead Pipe, Sheet Lead, and Bar Lead...
McCORMICK, GIBSON & CO.

P.L.A.T.O.S.
$150 BEST PATENT $150
GROVETOWN & HALL

P.L.A.T.O.S.
$150 BEST PATENT $150
GROVETOWN & HALL

P.L.A.T.O.S.
$150 BEST PATENT $150
GROVETOWN & HALL

P.L.A.T.O.S.
$150 BEST PATENT $150
GROVETOWN & HALL

P.L.A.T.O.S.
$150 BEST PATENT $150
GROVETOWN & HALL

P.L.A.T.O.S.
$150 BEST PATENT $150
GROVETOWN & HALL

P.L.A.T.O.S.
$150 BEST PATENT $150
GROVETOWN & HALL

P.L.A.T.O.S.
$150 BEST PATENT $150
GROVETOWN & HALL

P.L.A.T.O.S.
$150 BEST PATENT $150
GROVETOWN & HALL