Our Virginia Army. Viewed in all their aspects, we conside the movements of the army of Virginia, since Gen. Pore took the field, gratifying and encouraging. It is to be lamented that we met with so severe a loss at the battle of Cedar Mountain, but the mettle of our soldiers there has inspirited the whole country, and has wonderfully increased confidence in the army. All that is wanted to secure success is good generalship, and that we think we may reasonably exthe movements of the army of Virginia, and that we think we may reasonably expect with such leaders as Pope, Banks, and RUBESIDE.

" It is very clear that Jackson met with repulse he did not expect, and that he has tened to escape from a conflict he did not dars to proceed with further. He may make a stand at Gordonsville, but with BURNSIDE pressing down upon his right, and threatening to cut off his communications with Richmond, he will fight very shy. If he makes a stand there, and is de feated, he may lose his whole army. It is very probable that he will not venture on the experiment, but hasten to place himself beyond the danger of a flank attack, or of having his communications cut off by Burnside. Altogether we feel very hope ful of the success of our Virginia army, and shall not be surprised to see Richmon fall before many weeks are over.

Failure of the English Corn Crops. authority of its class in England, has the following paragraph in its issue of July

"The fair prospect of a fine and abundant harrest, which, in the early part of the season, cheered the hearts of farmers, has now finally passed away."

The importation of foreign corn into Great Britain, therefore, will be fully equal to that in 1861, which, (according to a parliamentary return just issued on motion of Mr. Caird, the most scientific and successful of British agriculturists) was 15,-760,551 imperial quarters. We may therefore confidently look to large orders for the purchase of our cereals, and a large reflux of gold during the present year. The quotations on the 26th ult. in London for American and Canadian fancy brands was 29s. to 31s. for 196 pounds.

Movements on the Peninsula. It seems to be pretty certain that Mc Clellan's army is moving away from Harrison Landing. All the heavy guns, and every thing else difficult of transportation, it is reported have been removed by vessels; while the army, it is said, is marchare the reports as we write this, but before it is printed the telegraph may have discredited or developed the reports.

The probability is, that this fine army will be sent to act with Pope and Burnside, on the line of attack which, if it had been adonted at first would have saved thou sands of lives, and untold millions of dol-

THE fight at Tazewell, East Tennesse over which the rebels made so much ado does not amount to much. Our forces were driven out of Taxewell by a superior force, forty missing. The rebels were driven out in turn, and our forces held the place at last accounts. The affair did not amount to more than a brisk skirmish. Why does not Buell drive the rebels out of East Tennessee, and deliver the Union men there from the oppressions of their enemies?

The Policy of the Administration The Washington correspondent of the N.

The position of the Administration on the and position of the Aministration of the subject of slavery cannot be misunderstood by any who honestly desire to arrive at the truth. The laws of Congress will be faithfully carried out; colored regiments will not be accepted directly by the government at present. Mr. Lincoln told the western deputation so a fortnight ago, though at-tempts baye since been made to represent the matter in a different light. But Mr. tempts have since dear many the perfective in a different light. But Mr. Lincoln is very cautious not to commit himself in the future. Those who know him best have no doubt about his intentions, and that if it becomes necessary he will crush slavery with the robellion. He believes that the first thing to be done is to overcome the great robel armies in the field. If the robel leaders then succumb, slavery in the States will not be touched except so far as the legislation of Congress will affect it. But if, after having been fairly beaten in battle—after having been fairly beaten in battle—after having been fairly beaten in battle—after having been fairly beaten in their rebellion, then the President will make use of slavery to utterly crush them. I fully believe this to be his position upon the subject. It is neither so strong and radical a position as some journals ascribe to him, nor so "conservative" and pro-slavery a position as other jourand pro-slavery a position as other jour nals persist in asserting that he occupies

"If one asks Mr. Stanton what is going to be done with McClellan's army, he explains, 'I am not general-in-chief—I know nothing of such matters—ask Halleck!' io replies; 'You forget we have a genera who commands all the armies and makes all the plans to suit himself—ask him! And then if you know Halleck and ask his you will get the reply, 'When you see a movement believe in it, and not before!' This is promising. Some of the men at headquarters are getting so they can keep military secrets. It is the most hopeful symptom of the times. Bye and bye the rebels of Richmond won't know our plans before they are two days old! Mr. Crittenden, Mr. Holt and Mr. Mal lory have had great influence with Mr. Seward and the President on the negro-question while such men as Gen. Rousquestion, while such men as Gen. Rous-seau, Mr. Casey, an M. C. from Maryland, seau, Mr. Casoy, an M. C. from Maryland, who are ready to abolish slavery though they are both slavehelders, have little beginning to excite intense curiosity "incoming intense with them." Mr. Lincoln sometimes admits such charges as this to be perfectly true, saying in his laughing way, you are my friend—I can say and do what I please with you. But this other man I am in doubt about vet it is important that I try for the Durpose of delivering a series

REGINERTAL ORDERS, No. 33: The Colonel

The following is a copy of one of the free papers" issued to the soldiers of this command, and is a duplicate of the one given Sergeant Prince River, the right general guide of the regiment, a negro of stately bearing, and combining a remarkable intellect with a very tolerable education. cation: -

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE SOUTH,
PORT ROYAL, S. C., August 1, 1862. The bearer, Prince Rivers, a Sergeant in irst Regiment South Carolina Volunteers, late claimed as a slave, having been employed in hostility to the United States, is hereby, agreeably to the law of the 6th of August 1561, declared very yourvan. His wife and hildren are also free.

D. Hunzze, Major General Commanding.

A Text and Commentary. An insurrection broke out among the ne gross, a few miles up the river, which cause he women of that neighborhood to apply to no women or tract neighborhood to apply to m armed boat, belonging to us, passing down, or aid; and the incipient revolt was stopped y informing the negroes that we should repol in attack by them upon the women and hildren:—Gen. Butler's late letter.

On this the N. Y. Tribune remarks: Gen. Butler is careful not to hint the reason that the "women and children" in question are obliged to appeal to him for protection; but we all know. It is because their husbands and brothers are away in the rebel armies fighting to dissolve the Union. While they are killing the Union ists of the North we are to kill those of the South, thus making everything screne. The paragraph quoted affords striking confirmation of Gen. Phelps' promise that "Society in the South seems on the point of dissolution." The slaves of Louisiana, says Gen. Butler, are held in subjection by the terror of the Union arms; while the masers of those slaves are notoriously engaged in the congenial and admired vocation of killing and maiming our brother Unionists in the National armies because they are Uniforms Held to Account. On and after this day, the 13th instant he order from the War Department re specting stragglers, in uniform is to be en-forced. Every person found in uniform in the public streets will be required to show his papers, prove himself a military man, and to have just cause for being absent from his command. Every one found in military clothes, and not able to give a satisfactory account of himself, will be obliged to go to the nearest military depot, where five dollars will be paid to the officer arresting him, and he will there be subject to a rigid examination, which will end in his being divested of his uniform, or in his being sent forthwith to his command. The enforcement of this order in the Eastern cities will, it is stated, rid them of a great nuisance in the shape of individuals. Who and to have just cause for being abse unisance in the shape of individuals who perambulate the streets in uniform for purposes of a private and often of an evil tharacter.—National Intelligencer.

A good STORY, and a true one, is told of Gen. Duryca, while he was stat oned at Baltimore as the Brigadier Commanding. He addressed a note to a person who had ordered a petty farmer upon his land, some nine miles from town, to hand down the inational flag. The father-in-law of this man, a president of one of our banks, waited upon the General to know whether waited upon the General to know whether he had written the note. "I did," said the General. "Are you the person ?" "No; I am his father-in-law." "I give you thirty minutes to produce your son-in-law in this said the al!" "Two hours, sir, two hours, or you both go to Fort McHenry." The flag went up at the appointed time, and there it has floated over since, and the two are now sworn Union men. prospect of the nine months' campaign is not very unpleasant for one who has any fancy for a soldier's life. Suppose the regiments to be formed by the beginning or the middle of September, the hot weather will be about over by that time. We are will be about over by that time. We prewill be about over by that time. We pre-sume the men will be sent at first into camps of instruction, perhaps in their re-spective States. We suppose that then some of them, possibly all of them, will be sent down towards the scene of action, as the cooler months come on, to garrison, towns and forts. After they have become pretty well drilled, some of them may be drawn down to join the active army, and pretty well drilled, some of them may be drawn down to join the active army, and taste those excitements of the field, for which many of them will by that time be glad to exchange the quiet life of camp. So the months will pass on, and May will find the militia regiments turning their faces homeward, "every man a hero," re-counting his experiences in the field.— Providence Journal.

He reports that two-thirds of the citizens of Richmond have left it because of an epidemic fever; that nearly every private and public house is a hospital; that the killed and wounded of the rebel army in the battles of the Chickahominy were admitted by the enemy to be thirty-two thousand; that most of their army land been removed to the south side of the river, in anticipation of our future movements, and that Richmond would have fallen an easy prey to our army; had it pressed back the foe, on Friday and Tuesday.—N.
