TUESDAY MORNING, AUG. 26.

The President's Letter.

The letter from Mr. LINCOLN to HORACE GREELEY will attract great attention, from its being such a singular procedure for a President, as well as from its contents. We presume its object is to set the President's policy clearly before the people, which is to restore the authority of the National Government over the rebellious States, at all hazards. If this can be done as easily without disturbing slavery, as otherwise, slavery will remain. But if it is necessary to the end proposed, to weaken, or destroy slavery altogether, the President will not hesitate to adopt such a policy. He will not unnecessarily assail slavery. But he will not permit slavery to stand in the way of the restoration of the Union.

The difference between Mr. LINCOLN and Mr. GREELEY is, that the latter believes that the Union cannot be restored without the destruction of slavery, and that life and treasure can both be saved, by a proclamation of emancipation at once; while the President is slowly coming up to the same point, but has not yet arrived at it. He does not yet see that the right time has come---that the necessity for the destruction of slavery yet exists. The signs are hopeful, however, that he is rapidly progressing in the direction of freedom, to which his heart impels him. The following from the Washington correspondence of the New York Commercial is significant, considering the source from which it comes:

Those who suppose that the President of the United States, with millions of strong and patriotic people at his back, is cringing and crouching before a few hundred thousand slaveholders in the Border States, do not know the man. He is taking his own time and his own way, as he has a perfect right to do---for on him rests the responsibility. He understands the people intuitively. He understands the people understand him. His policy is planned all matured, far ahead. His policy is marked, and designed for a great future. His principle anxiety is not to divide the North. He is fully up to the sublime public sentiment of the age, and will prove himself the man for the hour. Prepare the people for movements in the broad area of freedom, as grand as those made by the Emperor of Russia. The Republic will be saved on the basis of universal liberty."

Buell's Department.

East and Middle Tennessee---as well what remains of BUELL'S Department, as Kentucky and those portions of it which have been lately transferred to the command of another---are in a deplorable and humiliating condition, calling loudly for the attention of Government. We have hope, however, that under the vigorous measures of such earnest commanders as Col. METCALF, Gen. LEW WALLACE, Gen. BOYLE, and CASSIUS M. CLAY, if, as is now reported, he will accept a command to act with Gen. LEW WALLACE, the new Department will soon be delivered from guerrillas, and every other form of the rebel secesh element, which BUELL'S policy not only did not destroy, but actually protected and fostered.

What a disgrace it is to have to form a new Department in the rear of BUELL'S, and fight the rebels again over the same ground, while his army lies in state, like a huge mummy, extended over hundreds of miles, inert and useless. Such generalship needs looking after, and we trust General HALLECK, if he has not already, will, without further delay, give some attention to the affairs of his late Department.

Affairs on the Rappahannock.

All the information we have from Washington confirms the private advices we published this morning, in regard to the situation of affairs in Pope's army. A gentleman who holds a distinguished position, who left Washington on Saturday evening, states that he had it from the highest official sources, that a despatch rise in the Rappahannock had divided Jackson's army, and that Bigel was pushing him hard. We may have official advices by telegraph by the time this paper is published.

Gen. Halleck, it is said, has expelled all the newspaper correspondents from Pope's army; so that we shall have to wait for news as it is officially imparted, or can reach us by soldiers' letters. The indications now, however, are encouraging, that Pope has met with no disaster, but that Jackson has, and McClellan's army is in supporting distance of the Army of Virginia.

St. Louis in Danger.

The Anzeiger des Westens, a German paper published in St. Louis, Missouri, in its issue of Monday, declares that city to be in danger. It says:

"Twice we have warned our fellow citizens and told them that a design was ripening to obtain possession of St. Louis. Our warning has been taken too easy; some have smiled incredulously, others shrugged their shoulders. In short, no one seemed to think on the fearful meaning of such an event. Since then we have heard of three rebel camps in our county, in the vicinity of our city, which have been dispersed by our military, and yesterday evening our military authorities received the reliable intelligence that eighteen miles north of St. Louis, in the woods of Spanish Pond, a camp of one thousand rebels is located. The secessionists in the city bear their heads high, and the boldest among them boast already that in a few days St. Louis will be in their possession."

MAJOR GENERAL H. G. WRIGHT, the new commander of the Department of Kentucky and the adjacent States, has now entered on the duties of his command. The Cincinnati Gazette, of Saturday, says he passed through that city on the previous day, accompanied by his staff, Dr. Holster and Capt. J. W. Rice, en route to Louisville, now as before the Headquarters of this Department.

A SPECIAL despatch from Springfield, Ill., to the Chicago Tribune, of the 21st, says there are 46,000 men enrolled in the State. Thirty regiments are full, and the others are nearly so. Thousands are sleeping on the earth without tents and blankets as fast as they arrive in camp.

GEN. MCCLELLAN.---Washington papers deny that Gen. McClellan intends to resign.

The Army of the Potomac.

FORTRESS MONROE, Aug. 21, 1862.

All the troops that had arrived were sent off last night. This, however, was but a small proportion of the whole army. This morning Franklin's corps reached Hampton, and will embark as soon as possible.

Gen. McClellan has established his headquarters in a beautiful cedar grove on Mill creek, above Camp Hamilton. His stay will probably be protracted several days. The presence of the Hon. John Tucker has contributed materially to systematize and facilitate all matters relating to the embarkation and transportation of the army.

The policy of the present movement is variously commented on by the officers as they come in, who share the apprehension elsewhere felt for the fate of Pope's army, since it will now have to bear the shock of the entire rebel force. The necessity for re-enforcing him is felt to be imminent, and there prevails an undisguised anxiety to do so, to the end that another instance may not be added to the long list of cases where our forces in sufficient numbers have been a day too late.

This afternoon, Sumner's corps is on the road from Yorktown, making extraordinary time, under the spur of a telegraphic dispatch from Gen. McClellan sent him last evening. He will reach Hampton and Newport News tomorrow morning, and immediately embark on transports. Gen. Heintzelman's corps, at Yorktown, will have embarked and set sail this morning. Gen. Keyes' corps will follow from that point.

YORKTOWN, Va., Aug. 21, 1862.

Fifteen minutes ago---it is now 10 a. m.---the last man of Heintzelman's corps walked over the gangway plank at the dock here, so that Hooker's and Kearney's fighting divisions are afloat. Porter has gone from Newport News, where Franklin will commence embarking to-day. Keyes will embark here. Sumner marched from here this morning, Sedgwick's division of his corps to find transports at Hampton, and Richardson's at Newport News, after two days upon the road shall bring them to those places.

Under the energetic command of Gen. Van Allen, Yorktown has been put in splendid posture for defence. The identical guns captured here from the rebels are now mounted upon the works they in a great measure built, but all in Union hands. These defences have come back to plague the inventor. Gen. Van Allen's command is to be materially increased; should a rebel force deem it worth while to chase down this way thus far, it may possibly come, but no further.

At Williamsburg is an insane asylum, with nearly 300 inmates, which, when the town was first occupied, was placed in charge of army surgeons, the old authorities having refused the oath of allegiance not being permitted to remain. It has proved an elephant upon our hands, since we have been obliged to conduct it at Government expenses. Should the town be evacuated the citizens will be placed in charge, and in that way the Surgeons be relieved.

It has been stated that Heintzelman crossed the Chickahominy at Jew's Bridge. Such is the name of the place, but the crossing was upon a pontoon bridge built by McLeod Murphy's Engineer regiment. Want of transportation compelled the destruction of twenty pontoons after they had served their purpose. It is supposed that when the army is fairly at its destination, a fair proportion of the volunteers now arriving at the seat of war will be attached to it, resulting, doubtless, in the formation of several new corps d'armee. This policy is to constitute every two divisions a corps. I have it on very good authority that Generals Hooker and Sedgwick have been designated for promotion from division to corps commanders. A better selection could not be made, as the country and the army will agree. John Sedgwick, Major General of Volunteers, is cool, self-poised, unassuming, but brainy, now the senior colonel in active service in the regular army, and withal believes that war should be war. General Hooker's admirable fitness for command has been often noted in these columns, as it was before proven upon battle-fields.

FORTRESS MONROE---4 P. M.

Since writing the above I have steamed to this point, and I add these two items.

Williamsburg is held only by cavalry---hospitals and stores have been removed. Yorktown is, and is to be, the outpost.

The submarine telegraph between here and Cherry Stone, which had not been working for a week, has been relaid, and communication opened with Washington.

THE ENLISTMENTS IN THE BORDER STATES.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.---The industriously circulated reports that the Border States have filled their quota under the first call, and that no draft will be necessary in them, are entirely unfounded. Kentucky has not raised a single infantry, and but seven or eight cavalry regiments.

It is impossible to say how much Missouri has done, since the returns are exceedingly incomplete, but it is believed that she is far from having raised the number assigned her. It is unlikely, however, that there will be
