THE ECLECTIC FOR SETTEMBER.—Mr. Bidwell has a wide and rich field—the whole periodical literature of Europe—from which to select the contents of his migasine, and on the whole he does the work he undertakes admirably. Here hir his Eclectic we are cure to find the best and most atriking articles from all the leading reviews, etc. of Europe, many of which are neither republished nor circulated in this country. We have, for instance, in the present number three excellent articles from the British Quarterly, and several others from hardly inferior sources, which, but for the medium of the Ecletic, would have hardly ever reached the reading public on this side of the Atlantic. A beautifully executed portain of the Engress of Bussis forms the smbellishment of this number, which in every suspect will be found an attractive one. Mr. W. A. Gilderspress, 46 Fifth street, is the agent for the Eclectic in Pittsburgh.
