It is not necessary to say for the informa-tion of intelligant readers that the issue which is made against the President by those who dismor for "" proclamation declaring freedom to the slaves of rebels," as though the President wers' evading a duty enjoined by the confiscation law, is one which pro-ceeds on's faiss assumption. The only pro-clamation enjoined by that law has been already issued; and if the Congress had de-sired the President to issue an "exhorta-tion" to the negroes of the South, as well as to while rebels in arms, we may be assured that its members would not have been restrained by any considerations of modesty from say-ing so. The section relating to slaves of re-bels is as follows, and excents itself, without requiring any prolamation to give it force or requiring any proplamation to give it force or validity
