THE BATTLE OF SUNDAY.
A correspondent of the Philadelphia Press describes the battle of Sunday, of which the telegraph has given us only a hint: Gen. Pope seems to have met with a temporary reverse to-day. He was successfully driving the enemy during yesterday, whom he supposed to be under command of Gen.
Jackson, but about four o'clock a tremendous force of fresh troops appeared, and Gen.
Pope became convinced that heavy reinforcements for the enemy had succeeded in getting through the mountains, and were marching towards his right, with a view of turning his flank. He accordingly determined to withdraw his forces from the immediate field of action, which the enemy at once took possession of. It was mortifying for General Pope to do this, but necessarily so, and he was not to be blamed for it. He was not to be blamed for it. He was not to be blamed for it. He was not to be blamed for it. He was not to be blamed for it.

THE SITUATION IN VIRGINIA.
From some cause, we had neither our special nor other dispatches from Washington last night, and in the consequent absence of any information, the news of the 1st reported facts from that quarter and our army in Virginia, we think it important to post up those previous facts in order, so that the confusion which has been felt and complained of in the columns of this paper, may be cleared up to a clearer view of the important events which will render the close of last week memorable in the history of the war. We had previously reported, in the issue of the 1st, the general view of the recent military operations in Virginia, which will make the present situation of affairs better understood than by any other account we have seen, and we accordingly send a concise review of it. It is as follows:

THE BATTLE OF SUNDAY.
The telegraph reports which will be found in another column of this paper, give a view of the result of our military maneuvers in Kentucky. Of the disaster at Richmond, which has opened the way to the rebel army, we have already reported. To the principal city in the State, after Louiville, and to Frankfort, the Capital, whence the public documents have had to be hurried away to prevent their falling into the hands of the enemy, we have already reported. It is proper to lay the following explanation before our readers. It is from the Cincinnati Gazette, yesterday, and, we believe, correctly states the facts of the case. It is as follows:
