SATURDAY MORNING, SEPT. 18.

To the Beaders of the Gazette. The undersigned, as is well known to many readers of this paper, has been connected entire overthrow of the rebellion, and the legalized freedom of every human being on the soll of the American Union. D. N. WHITE.

Treason Umasked. We have fallen upon perilous times. Treason lurks in every part of the country, and only waits its opportunity to bind the liferies of the people hand and foot, and deliver them over to that cristocratic power which, under Jeyr. Davis, is wading through blood to the establishment of its supremacy. The extract below is from an article in the New York Herald, which has organized in tense excitement in Washington, and elsewhere. In it the mask is thrown off boldly, it may be unguardedly. The article ne doubt reveals one of the schemes of the traitors who are sapping the life-blood of the nation. That such deviliah suggestions can be seriously and safely made, in such perilous times as these, shows that the traitors feel and have confidence in their power. The extract they our Washington televilles are confidence in their power. The extract second received the proposition in the tense will propose the duty of all those who value our republican institutions, and authority.

In this crisis it becomes the duty of all these who walue our republican institutions, and authority.

In this crisis it becomes the duty of all those who value our republican institutions, and such crisis in the constant the step will the set will necessary step in for the rebels, but the this is what our generals propose.

But in this pr We have fallen upon perilous times. was referred to by our Washington telegraphic correspondent, and is as follows; Under these circumstances, what is the duty of General McClellan? His position is like that of Wellington in the Spanish peningula, when he was interfered with by the British Cabinet; and it is a duty which he owes to the country, no less than to himself, to follow the example of that illustrious and matricitic general. When illustrious and patriotic general. When tion were bent on his destruction and defeat of the army which he was lead he firmly took his stand and insisted tha the cabal should be broken up. His coun-try was in danger, and he was in a posi-tion to dictate terms. His remonstrances had the desired effect: the meddling Cab inet was overthrown, and thenceforway ictory crowned the British arms. Nov this is the ground which McClellan ought to take in reference to that portion of the administration at Washington which is responsible for the present condition of things. He ought to insist upon the modification and reconstruction of the Cabonines, in order to have it purged of the radical taint which may again infuse its posion over the whole. Now is the time for him to prove himself not only a great general, but a statesman worthy of the occasion and of the responsibility which he has assumed. The safety of the country is intrusted to him. He is bound to sea that no insidious enemy lurks behind about forward war policy—in favor of subduing this is the ground which McClellan ought to take in reference to that portion of the ad-ministration at Washington which is restake. He is master of the situation. He is the only man in whom the troops and the country have confidence as a general for the chief command of the army in the field. He has a right to demand indemnity for the past and security for the future, and he ought not to rest satisfied till-he is assured by facts, not mere promises, that his plans shall not be interfered with here.

Government, rightfully established, has nis plans said not de interfered with nereafter. The game is now in his hands, and solless he plays his best trump and disposes effectually of the radicals, as he has 'the power to do, they will soon dispose of him by striking him down in the very crisis of interests that assail its life. This much the race vet unborn. In the same number of the Herald in which this diabolical language is uttered is a letter from Albany, which is placed in | Wilks' Times, occurs the following prega prominent position, in which this threat- nant paragraph:

civil power is nothing, unless it is every thing—unless its complete freedom from all military control is assured. The moment it is not all-powerful, its strength is as tow over which fire has passed. Such infernal suggestions as those above quoted, in times of peace might be passed over as the ravings of a wretch who hates the country which has afforded him an asylum; but in the mildst of a great civil war, with a victorious foe knocking at the gates of the capital, and with heart-burnings and jealousies, if not treachery in the army, it cannot be permitted with eafety. The government must orush this bold treason at once, or, as the traitors say, the President or the radicals, or both, will be shown the flow cannot maintain the supremacy of serving armo across what the Examiner acalles the capital and with a strength from the rich valley which connect or the radicals, or both, will be shown the door.

To the Loyal Voters of Allegheny County.

That the life of the Republic is in deadly peril, is patent to the observation of every intelligent man. The soil of Pennsylvania originally obtained by fair purchase, and which we have inherited in peace and honesty, is invaded by rebels—rebels against good government—rebels against humanity—rebels against God and His just humanity—rebels against God and His ju men! Because a majority of the loyal voters of the Republic choose Abraham Lincoln President of the United States. For this cause over one hundred thousand brave men have perished upon the field of battle, or by its incidental dangers. For this cause over a million of our freemen of the North are called away from their homes and avocations to defend the integrity of the nation's life. To assert the rightful power of the Constitution and upon held the flag which is the symbol of national root of the tree which has borne the bitter fruit which we are now eating. We must not only defeat their regiments upon the battle field, but we must destroy the means whereby those rebel regiments are fed and clothed. If the North contributes uncomplainingly the flour of her youth and the maturity of her manhood, the South must contribute the sources of her labor and the means whereby her armed legions are sustained, whilst they assail the lines of our soldiers, and put in peril the safety of our labor and they again. They have done this before; they will be destroyed if they cannot do go again. They havard destruction, and they
