respondence of the Pittsburgh Gazette WASHINGTON, Sept. 18, 1862. The tides of hope and dar have swelled er sunk in this city with every click of the telegraph or avery flying ramor of the past few days. The elation of Mooday was succeeded by the depression of Tuesday. The successful attacks of Sunday, near Middletown, where Burnside came up with, and routed the lousy hordes of rebels had scarcely been made public, before the disgraceful surrender of Harper's Ferry came to cast all down with shame.

West Point strategist—is Buell again going to disappoint what we may call the forlorn hope that has been reposed in him? Is he about to repeat his inaction of last year over again, and risk everything going to destruction, so he can keep out of the way of it? It has been promised, by those who pretended to have faith in him still left, that he would certainly watch Brace's novements; but that is just what he has not done.

For our own part, we confess that we never believed that he would watch anybody's movements. As long as Brace's would remain at rest, Buell might not be made, his answer was, in several instances, "Such is not my orders." Born this wife ended to have faith in the has not done.

For our own part, we confess that we never believed that he would watch anybody's movements. As long as Brace's would remain at rest, Buell might not be made, his answer was, in several instances, "Such is not my orders." Born this man, fighting these enemies of mankind at long range, and speedily running short of any to me. Was it awise or sensible course to put such a man in charge of a post of such importance? Were the laurels of Bull Bun and the subsequant court martisi, which failed in doing him full justice, such recommendations imbedility, could think of him as likely to be anywhere that he ought to be, or anywhere that he ought to be, or anywhere that he nought to be, or anywhere that he nought to be of use?

Buchanan read the speech delivered by Thaddeus Stevens's Speech.

When Mr. Buchanan read the speech delivered by Thaddeus Stevens on his nomination for Congress in the Ninth District, an extract of which we published in the Guestic he is said to have remarked:

It is a pity that Mr. Stevens made that speech, because it will be published in the Southern papers, and the Southerners will be more excited against us than over."
