THURSDAY MORNING, SEPT. 25.

Who will Support the "Democratic" Ticket.

The substance of the following article appears in the Philadelphia Press. It is as well adapted to this latitude as to that.

The best way of estimating the real interests at stake in the coming election, is to inquire who are to be found in the ranks of the opposing parties. We regard the election in Pennsylvania as one of the most important that will ever be held. The expression of popular opinion, then to be recorded, will do very much to shape popular opinion in the North, and it may influence the settlement of the present war. We are but allies of our brethren in Virginia. We are fighting in the same cause, devoted to the same principles, and conquering a common enemy with the ballots, while they conquer him with the bullets. We have to meet the sympathisers with secession in our midst, and, by overwhelming them, again impress upon the minds of the Southern people the perfect unanimity of the Northern mind. We are very far from saying that every citizen who votes the Breckinridge ticket is a sympathiser with secession, but we will say that every sympathiser with secession will vote the Breckinridge ticket. They all labor and long for its success, for to them that success indicates a paralysis of the Union feeling in the North, an eventual overthrow of Republican institutions, and the downfall of a Republican Constitution.

JAMES BUCHANAN will vote the Breckinridge ticket!

CHARLES INGERSOLL, JOSIAH RANDALL, Gen. PATTERSON, JAMES C. VANDYKE, and PIERCE BUTLER, will vote the Breckinridge ticket.

The men who refused to subscribe a dollar to the Bounty Fund will vote the Breckinridge ticket.

The contractors who are now making fortunes out of the Government, and at the same time endeavoring to ruin it, will vote the Breckinridge ticket.

The men who, like WILLIAM B. REED, were anxious that Pennsylvania should go with the South, will vote the Breckinridge ticket.

The men who look upon the valor of our soldiers, the skill of our Generals, the glory of our cause, and the vast sums expended on our military operations as so many elements of a mere "Black Republican job," will vote the Breckinridge ticket.

The men who were soldiers in the camp, and became civilians as soon as their regiments were ordered into the field, will vote the Breckinridge ticket.

The men who think that, in defending our homes, we are murdering misguided brethren, and fighting an Abolition war, will vote the Breckinridge ticket.

The men who think that McCLELLAN should assume despotic sway, and override Congress, will vote the Breckinridge ticket.

The men who think that the President, in his earnest endeavors to save the State and repress sedition, becomes a despot, will vote the Breckinridge ticket.

Not a single one of these men will vote for the Union ticket. They may endeavor to punish those of their candidates who supported DOUGLAS in the olden time, by voting against them; but they will not vote for any single candidate on the ticket nominated by the loyal friends of the Administration. They control the Democratic organisation, and, in so doing, control all who are timid or ambitious, no matter what their former political proclivities may have been. When we see good Douglas men allowing themselves to be so intimidated by that organization, that they conciliate, support, and even permit themselves to run for office upon the same ticket with the bitterest and most malignant of the enemies who hunted DOUGLAS to his grave, we see the wonderful power of the great party machinery, and the lamentable degree of political depravity engendered by the poison of Secession. The country has no friends but those who are friends of the Administration; the Administration has no friends but those who give a warm, earnest, and loyal support to its measures. No citizen who recognizes this obligation will fail to admit it at the ballot-box, by supporting the nominees of the Union Convention, and opposing all who may claim any sympathy or countenance from the Breckinridge leaders, or the creatures of their organization.

Condition of the Rebel Army.

The New York Times has a lengthy article descriptive of the rebel army as it recrossed the Potomac after its disastrous campaign in Maryland. It is derived from a conversation with one of the surgeons of the loyal army, who was captured at Harper's Ferry, a gentleman of scientific habit of mind and close observation. There were two corps, those of Longstreet and Stonewall Jackson; they marched in two solid columns over the bridges, and were about fifteen hours in passing. This gentleman counted the numbers in a given time, and then made a rough estimate of the whole force: his reckoning would show those corps alone numbering close upon 60,000.

He had heard the usual accounts of the costume, appearance and condition of the rebel army, and like most of us, supposed them exaggerations. But he now says that no descriptions he has seen approach the truth. There never was beheld such a gang of ragged, rowdy looking men. It was like an army of rag-pickers. There was no uniform or attempt at uniform. Officers and men were equally dirty and dingy. The hats were commonly old "Wide-Awakes," stained by a long campaign, often with the tops gone and their hair streaming out. The trowsers were of all colors, and generally in tatters up to the knees. The coats, if they had any, were dirty and ragged, and often well greased by the piece of bacon which each man carried on his bayonet. The shirts were black from long use. One officer told our informant that he had not been able to change his shirt for six weeks. Their blankets were of all colors and materials—often bits of carpeting and old bed-comforters. Nearly one-half of the men were barefooted. They carried their crackers and haversacks and caps all together in their pockets. Both officers and men were excessively lousy, and the stench from the passing columns was almost unbearable.

Many of the regiments, which originally consisted of 1000 to 1100 men, had been reduced to 200, and even 150. The men were by no means in good spirits. They told our informant that they had been constantly walking since the battles before Richmond, and with very little to eat. They reproached JACKSON with working them too hard. They had a forlorn and hopeless aspect, and felt the deepest disappointment at their reception in Maryland. They were worn out, exhausted and dispirited. They want rest and food; but it is devoutly to be hoped that they shall have very little of either until they lay down their arms. Spades will not be needed in operations against such an army as that. We trust MCCLELLAN, if he cannot catch them, will at least keep them on the run.

The New York "World" on the President's Proclamation.

When a journal like the New York World, for example, hoists the colors of the Democracy, it is curious that, almost simultaneously, its early professed piety should so far desert it, as to make it even lose the show of a decent regard for truth, hitherto in some measure, though latterly with some hesitation, maintained by it. In noticing the President's proclamation, it says:

"This new proclamation really amounts to little. The President proclaims, in substance, that on the first of next January he will issue still another proclamation, putting in force the main provisions of the confiscation act."

Truly, if the second sentence in the above extract at all represents the scope of the proclamation, the first sentence is entirely to the point—"this new proclamation really amounts to little." But if the World wished to make this out, it had better have tried to do it by argument, like the National Intelligencer and the Journal of Commerce, than by such bare-faced misrepresentation as it has ventured upon in the above-quoted sentence.

The World must assume that its readers will read nothing but its own statements—not even the text of the President's proclamation, the scope and clearly expressed meaning of which it deliberately misstates. According to the World, the "substance" of the proclamation is only "that, on the first of next January, he will issue still another proclamation, putting in force the main provisions of the Confiscation act." According to the President's proclamation, the "main provisions of the Confiscation act" are distinctly recognised to be in force now, on the expiration of the sixty days' notice prescribed by the act itself—that is to say, on and after the very date of the "new proclamation." But it is not its reference to, and connection with, the "Confiscation act," which will make this "new proclamation" and the 22d of September, 1862, the day it is dated, memorable in our history. The World, if not more than half blinded by the partisan medium through which its sad necessity, or still sadder perversity, has forced it to look at things, would see that the "substance" of "this new proclamation" is not in what it decides about "confiscation" at all, but in what it decides about "EMANCIPATION." As to the former, it decides nothing but what Congress had decided before—nor does it prescribe anything by way of instructions to those who are to put the law in force. But it is very different as to the latter. It cites the additional article of war, passed by Congress, and the 9th and 10th sections of "An act to suppress insurrection," etc., both declaring that the slaves who take refuge within our lines "shall be forever free"—and thus proceeds to secure the observance of this law:

"And I do hereby enjoin upon and order all persons engaged in the military and naval service of the United States to observe, obey, and enforce within their respective spheres of service, the act and sections above recited."

So much for what "this new proclamation" has in it, that takes effect immediately. But even that which is postponed to the first of January next, is not what the World asserts. It is not "another proclamation" which is to "put in force the main provisions of the confiscation act"—but this one, itself which definitely declares—

"That on the first day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, all persons held as slaves within any State, or any designated part of a State, the people whereof shall then be in rebellion against the United States, shall be then, thenceforward and forever free."

What alone remains to be done, on the first of January, by "another proclamation," is merely to "designate" the States, and the parts of States, if any, that shall "then be in rebellion against the United States." This certainly "amounts to" more than a "little"—as the World may see by the "first of next January," if it can manage to live so long, as an organ of the Seymour Democracy in New York.

The Army Officers and the President's Proclamation.

No doubt the President's proclamation was a bitter pill to many of the regular old army officers, and possibly some of them were so overmastered by their feelings, that they would do what our Washington correspondent says—threaten to resign. But the sober second thought will not probably approve this rash self-martyrdom. The Washington correspondent of the New York Evening Post, has met some of them in this advanced stage of reflection, for he telegraphs to that journal:

"Our army officers appear to acquiesce in it, and some of them express warm approval."

—As to the officers of the volunteer army, of course they will as "warmly approve" it, as nine-tenths of the people of the country do. The dregs of the pro-slavery democracy, the traitorous followers of J. C. Breckinridge, will every where receive the proclamation with that feeling which has become chronic with them, disgust. But there is not even a fraction of this besotted political faction in the volunteer army.

WESTMORELAND county has 7193 men liable to militia duty, and 2847 men in service. The quota for the county, under the call, is 4178; number to be drafted 831. Penn township has 276 liable to duty. Its quota is 122; it has sent 23 men into service, and has 96 subject to draft. Do butternuts grow plentifully in that township?

SUBLIME.—In a recent article, puffing itself up to the skies, The N. Y. Herald says it has attained its high position, and made its enviable reputation with the public, "only by its strict adherence to truth!"

CONGRESSIONAL NOMINATIONS.—James Hooven, of Norristown, is the Union candidate for Congress in the Sixth District—Montgomery and Lehigh.

The Breckinridgers have nominated J. P. Silles, of Lehigh, for the same position.

Republican Executive Committee.

The members of the Committee will meet at the office of the Chairman, No 93 Grant street, Pittsburgh, on FRIDAY, Sept. 26th, 1862, at 10 o'clock a. m. The attendance of every member is desired, as business of importance will be presented for their consideration. WM. B. NEGLEY, Chairman.

Duff's College

IRON BUILDINGS,

PITTSBURGH, PA

Persons desiring to be thoroughly educated for business will here obtain the following important advantages over all other Colleges of the kind—

1st. It is the only one in the Union known to be conducted by a practical merchant.

2d. Here the student has an unlimited course of instruction. All others, so often "permanently located," have either exploded or repeatedly changed hands, leaving their pupils to find their time unlimited" elsewhere.

3d. Duff's System of Book Keeping are pronounced by the highest commercial authorities the best published.

4th. The pupils of all other schools remain ignorant of the Private Ledger.

5th. There is not yet a regular system of Private Bank Book-Keeping taught elsewhere in the country.

6th. The Lectures of the senior Principal convey information to the student of commerce that can be obtained alone from a practical business man.

7th. His long standing, widely known reputation as a merchant, as an accountant, as an author, and as a preceptor, makes his diploma a passport to the confidence of business men in every part of the Union.

8th. The accuracy of his decisions in numerous matters of disputed accounts, during twenty-two years' practice as a public accountant has never once been set aside by Courts or Arbitrators.

9th. Steamboat Book-keeping has never been thoroughly taught in any other College in the city.

10th. Our Professors of Penmanship are awarded the first premium for penmanship by the Ohio State Fair at Cleveland, for 1862, over all the best penmen in the West. They being also Professors of Book-Keeping, the student has the benefit of their instruction in penmanship while writing up their books, as well as during the writing hour.

Our elegant new Pamphlet Circular, pp. 66; a large Ornamental Card and samples of our Penmen's Business and Ornamental Writing, mailed, postpaid, on receipt of 25 cents, by

P. DUFF & SON, Principals.

Strangers will please inquire our reputation in the city, where we are best known.

WRITING FLUID—as good as any, perhaps better, in our judgment, SMITH & BROWNELL'S WRITING FLUID has no superior. Prejudice aside, we hazard nothing in presenting this beautiful fluid to the community. We speak mainly to gratify a prejudice in favor of a foreign article! Give it a trial and you will want no better fluid. Price and quality will commend it.
