TUESDAY MORNING, OCT. 7.

The Effect of the Election.

This war will be protracted indefinitely if the party organization headed by Hughes kill his co-adjutors is successful in this State.

We know that when the rebels entered upon their damnable enterprise of breaking up the Union they counted upon the co-operation and support of the democracy of the North. That they were not mistaken in their man, so far as the leaders of the Breckenridge wing are concerned, is now manifest. The voluntary publication by F. W. Hughes of his traitorous resolution proves this. That resolution is the platform of that wing of the party in this State, and says to the rebels in arms: "Hold on! We will be with you directly. One hundred and fifty thousand Republicans and loyal Democrats are in the army, and we think we are able to beat the rest by the magic force of the old party name. Hold on! We can send a majority of our friends to the lower house of Congress, and, better than that, we can send Mr. Hughes, the author of that secession resolution, to the Senate, and then we can give you anything you ask. We can re-unite the Democracy of the North with their brethren of the Confederate States, and crush for ever the Abolitionists and Black Republicans; or, in the vigorous language of our gallant leader, Mr. Hughes, we can at least make Pennsylvania secede from the Union, and join herself with the South, and leave Rhode Island, and Connecticut, and Massachusetts, and them d---d little petty States, to subsist on their Codfish and Plymouth Rock." His resolution sets forth fully and clearly the advantages of the arrangement."

This is what the Hughes programme and platform say to the rebels in arms, and Mr. Barr, of the Post, one of the candidates on the State ticket of that party, emphatically endorses it. Let that ticket be successful, and the rebels will be encouraged to hold on with ten fold tenacity and desperation until their friends can come into power. Thus will the triumph of that party be the triumph of treason and rebellion. Its defeat will have exactly the opposite effect. We are glad the issue is so clearly defined.

The Army in Kentucky---Its Command---New Organization, etc.

A letter from Louisville, dated the 2d inst., to the Cincinnati Gazette gives the following information:

The order removing Gen. Buell is said to have been delivered here early on Monday morning. The Messenger-Kid of Gen. Halleck was closeted all the forenoon with Gen. Thomas, whom it was whispered was to succeed Gen. Buell. The result of the interview only is known. West Point came up to the rescue of Gen. Buell. Gens. Thomas M'Cook, Gilbert, Wood, Jackson, Rosecrans, Fry, and other West Point and Kentucky Generals, united in a dispatch to Gen. Halleck, asking the retention of Gen. Buell, as commander of the Department, and the substitution of Gen. Thomas as commander in the field. This arrangement was accepted by Gen. Halleck, and the result is, Gen. Buell remains Commander-in-Chief of the Department of the Ohio, and will remain at headquarters, to be established for the present, in this city. Maj. Gen. Geo. H. Thomas is Commander-in-Chief in the field, and will have complete control of the army in any engagement. The separate organization of the army of Kentucky has been abandoned, and that army becomes a part of the army of the Ohio. The army of the Ohio is then divided into three grand corps d'armee, commanded by Major General Alex. McD. McCook, 1st corps, and right wing; Major General Thomas L. Crittenden, 2d corps; and left wing; and Major General C. C. Gilbert, 3d corps, and centre. Each of these corps is strong, comprising a blank number of divisions, each of which is now much stronger than the former divisions of the same army. I am touching on delicate ground in this matter, and must beg your readers to be content with the above.

It is sufficient to form an idea of the organization of this army for work in the field. Had Nelson lived he would have had the right and McCook the left, while Crittenden would have had Gilbert's place. I do not know what to say of Thomas. He is not a dashing officer. Indeed I do not know that in the corps or field commanders there is a single dashing officer, unless it is Crittenden. None of them have any energy of values, but unfortunately none have any of the opposite faults. McCook will fight---fight well and nobly, but his ability as the Commander of a corps, a position requiring great administrative ability, may be doubted. He is unfortunate in having, still, Rosecrans and Jackson, divisions commanders of no ordinary ability. Gen. Sill, late of the 33d, Ohio Infantry, has command of Gen. McCook's division. Gen. Rosseau has command of Mitchell's 3d, and Gen. R. S. Jackson commands a newly organized division, whose number I do not know.

Condition of the Rebel Army.

A letter from Sharpsburg, dated 2nd inst., to the N. Y. Tribune says:

Three refugees from Martinsburg, merchants, robbed of their stores, whose opportunities for knowing the condition, whereabout conduct, and movements of the rebel army, have been abundant and well-improved, came over last night with Pleasanton's Cavalry. Their statements fully corroborate the accounts of deserters and paroled prisoners from Winchester.

The enemy's cavalry is at Big Springs, two miles beyond Martinsburg, commanded by Stuart. The army under Lee, including the divisions under Jackson, Hill, and Longstreet, are extended from Bunker Hill, through Winchester, to Berry's Ferry, on the Shenandoah.

All manner of forage and food about Martinsburg has been seized. The large flour mills in the vicinity have been taken possession of, and are guarded by the rebel soldiers. No one is allowed to remove flour, except with a permit from the Provost Marshal. Much of the large accumulation of grain in these mills is being removed South. The farmers who have not threshed their wheat, are ordered to do so immediately. No distinction is made, rich and poor, Union men and Secessionists, are alike despoiled of their supplies.

The army has no tents, and all that has been said and written concerning the destitution of the army, the story of the want of shoes, and torn, ragged, and filthy condition of the soldiers' clothes is again repeated and vouched for.

One of these merchants asked a soldier, who came into his store, where they were going to next? "To Richmond," was the reply. "What will you do there?" "Oh starve, by G---d, and rot in dirt," said the soldier.

How can such an army meet the approach of winter?

THE rebel prisoners, who had repeatedly broken their oaths after being captured by our forces and liberated on parole, were recently shot at Macon City, Missouri.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL.

Correspondence of the Pittsburgh Gazette.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2, 1862.

It is claimed here in the best informed circles that New York will give Wadsworth from fifty to sixty thousand majority for Governor! That the proclamation has drawn the teeth of the pro-slavery blood hounds, and that the Republican party will be invincible upon the grand platform of "Abraham Lincoln and Emancipation."

But things are not so clear as regards our own State. What are all our friends doing? Is the author of the New Geneva secession speech---John L. Dawson---to represent or misrepresented the Cavode District in the next Congress? Is Lawrence County, the home of the gallant Col. Leasure and the glorious regiment he has led through many a perilous field, to have as her spokesman in the National Legislature, Mr. Lazear, whose every vote in the last Congress shows that his sympathies are as much with their enemies, as their friends?

Let there be a grand rally every where in Pennsylvania of all the loyalty which now remains at home. Let our own member---Gen. Moorhead---have an immense majority. Let the gallant and eloquent Williams, in the Allegheny district, be sent here to speak from a forum worthy of his great powers. Great issues hang upon the decision of the hour. Are we to have a country known and honored as of yore, or are the hands of conspirators, which Vallandigham leads, to sell out the loyal North by some political cut and shuffle as always heretofore it has been done? God forbid! Let Pennsylvania rally in her might in this dark hour! Let her defeat the democratic programme---the exhaustive process, by which the war is to be prolonged until it can be settled on "old democratic principles," as Major Key declared was the design.

The President's proclamation has wrested from the traitorous hands of the Breckinridge Democracy the only really dangerous weapon they possessed. It was their intention to claim to be the friends par excellence of Mr. LINCOLN, and to use his great and well-deserved popularity as a club to beat his friends with. That game is dashed. Call them now to the line and no flinching! Are you in favor of the proclamation and a speedy termination of the war? If so, support the President; stand by the energetic Secretary of War, who believes in striking, pursuing and destroying the traitors in arms! No shirking, my gentlemen of the Butternut persuasion! You can no longer claim to be the friends of "conservative" principles and the "peculiar and close familiars" of Mr. LINCOLN, unless you come up to his standard. Just come shoulder and stand and work there, and we shall hail you as a grand reserve who, though late in the field, are there, nevertheless, in time to aid in this great battle of the ages. So much for politics from this standpoint.

THE ARMY.

Still on the night air rings out the cry of the sentinel---"All quiet along the Potomac." Apropos of "Forward to Richmond," I have a little anecdote which I must relate. For Spartan brevity and force, the final order is equal to the best. This:

"Among a large number of articles sent to the Sanitary Commission of this city, was a good and patriotic old lady's last tribute, to be laid on the altar of country, bearing the following inscription: "These socks were spun and knit by Mrs. Zerah Clapp, 95 years old, whose hands in youth were engaged in moulding bullets in the revolutionary war. Keep the toes of these socks towards the rebels."

CHARLESTON, N. Y.

If Mrs. Clapp were only a man, why should she not be made Major General Commanding the army of the Potomac?

As a chronicler of the general gossip, I cannot neglect mentioning that among the on dits is this---that "fighting Joe. HOOKER" as he is called, is to be called to the place of Gen. MCCLELLAN. I confess I can trace the report to no authentic source, but that there is talk to that effect is true. Gen. HOOKER is among the bravest of the brave. He is one of the men who believes in "pursuing and destroying" the enemy. At every battle field he has won laurels. The fight at Williamsburg was his and Heintzleman's. The President has made a visit to the headquarters of the army at Sharpsburg, and it may be that the rumors alluded to have their origin in that visit. It has, I am sure, some meaning more than mere ceremony and curiosity. Mr. LINCOLN is earnest at any rate, whoever else is or may not be. God bless him!

THE LOYAL GOVERNORS' ADDRESS.

This elegant, forcible, brief and timely paper is hailed among loyal men here as a topical sign of the times. As a paper it seems to me a very excellent production. The whole argument in favor of emancipation is presented in few but powerful sentences. I am glad it is before the public, that the brazen lies of that diabolical sheet, the New York Herald, may be held up to their merited condemnation. Gov. Andrew is the reputed framer of the address. Whether it were he or Charles Sumner, or Gov. Springer, or they all, and all the other true and loyal men whose names are subscribed---no matter. There it stands; the worthy pledge of so many great and powerful States to continue in their efforts to "perpetuate the authority of the government and the life of the nation."

THE REBEL ARMY.

This is reported to be massed in strong positions between A creek called Opequan and a turnpike road connecting Williamsport and Winchester, through Martinsburg. It is probable that its intends here, on his own chosen ground, where his left and is having, amply time to strengthen himself by heavy works, fortifications and reinforcements, to offer battle. By some manœuvre he will be able, probably, to force McClellan to fight just where he (the enemy) may desire. But let us labor and pray for the best. We are in the hands of the Almighty, who is dealing with us severely, but behind the clouds there must be a shining sun somewhere.

THE DEAD AT ANTIETAM.

I yesterday received a letter from Col. Kiddoo, of the 137th Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, in which he gives me an item of public interest to the following effect:

The 137th Regiment was one of three which buried the dead on that battle-field. It (the 137th) buried 398 secesh; and 125 Union troops. The two other regiments were at work one day longer, and Col. K. was told by their officers that the proportion of dead was about the same throughout, as that above noted. This is a very remarkable statement. Our loss being 5000, it would make theirs more than seven times that, a figure which I cannot accept implicitly, because with the number of wounded, such a loss in dead would imply we should have the whole army hors de combat. VINDEX.

STARVATION IMMINENT.---Reports from Winchester state that the residents of that town and its vicinity, even of known secession proclivities, are getting their families north of the Potomac, crossing higher up the river, because nothing whatever eatable is to be had there, by the richest among them, but flour, and a little old bacon---the latter at from one dollar to one dollar and fifty cents per pound. They aver on reaching Maryland that they came north to escape starvation.

GEN. CASS ON THE PROCLAMATION.---Parson Brownlow, in a speech to 15,000 people at Detroit, on Thursday, approved the
