THURSDAY MORNING, OCT. 16.

A Letter of Gen. Scott's on the Rebellion.

"Prince" JOHN VAN BUREN, at the meeting of the Seymour-Wood "Democracy," of New York, at the Cooper Institute, on Monday night, read the following letter, addressed by Gen. SCOTT to Mr. SEWARD, the day before the inauguration of Mr. LINCOLN:

WASHINGTON, March 3, 1861.

DEAR SIR: Hoping that in a day or two the new President will have happily passed through all personal dangers, and find himself installed an honored successor of the great Washington, with you as the chief of his Cabinet, I beg leave to repeat, in writing, what I have before said to you orally.

This supplement to my printed "views," (dated in October last)—on the highly disordered condition of our (to late) happy and glorious Union. To meet the extraordinary exigencies of the times, it seems to me that I am guilty of no arrogance in inviting the President's field of selection to one of the four plans of procedure subjoined:

I. Throw off the old and assume a new designation—the Union party. Adopt the conciliatory measures proposed by Mr. Crittenden or the Peace Convention, and my life upon it, we shall have no new case of secession; but on the contrary, an early return of many, if not of all the States which have already broken off from the Union. Without some equally benign measure, the remaining slaveholding States will probably join the Montgomery Confederacy in less than sixty days; when this city, being included in a foreign country, would require a permanent garrison of at least thirty-five thousand troops to protect the Government within it.

II. Collect the duties on foreign goods outside the ports of which the Government has lost the command, or close such ports by act of Congress and blockade them.

III. Conquer the seceded States by invading armies. No doubt this might be done in two or three years by a young and able General—a Wolfe, a Desaix, a Hoche—with 800,000 disciplined men, estimating a third for garrisons and the loss of a yet greater number by skirmishes, sieges, battles and Southern fevers. The destruction of life and property on the other side, would be frightful, however perfect the moral discipline of the invaders.

The conquest completed at that enormous waste of human life to the North and Northwest—with at least $250,000,000 added thereto, and cui bono? Fifteen devastated provinces not to be brought into harmony with their conquerors, but to be held for generations by heavy garrisons, at an expense quadruple the most onerous taxes which it would be possible to extort from them, followed by a Protectorate or an Emancipation.

IV. Say to the seceded States—Wayward sisters depart in peace.

In haste, I remain, very truly, yours,

WINFIELD SCOTT.

Hon. WM. H. SEWARD, &c., &c.

HOW VAN BUREN came into possession of this letter is not stated in the speech he made on the occasion; but we shall take it for granted that it is a genuine document, as it certainly is a very suggestive and important one. He requested the reporters to state that he made it public without the permission of Gen. SCOTT.

Let it be borne in mind that this letter was written the day before President LINCOLN was inaugurated, and forty days before the rebels fired upon Fort Sumter. At that day good and wise men still hoped that some adjustment of the national difficulties could be arrived at, and the President, in his inaugural address, earnestly exhorted his "dissatisfied countrymen"—(as with singular gentleness he called the men who had already torn their States from the bonds of the Union, seized the national forts, arsenals, mints and other property, and in every way, except in active warfare, had put themselves into a belligerent attitude towards the government of the United States)—to pause in their mad career, return to the Union, and unite with the people of the loyal States in earnest effort to restore peace and unity. His paternal counsels were met with haughty contempt and renewed outrages; a chartered vessel, a merchantman, carrying provisions to a starving garrison was fired into and driven back; and then, the war was fully inaugurated by the bombardment of Fort Sumter, which put an end to all possibility of the adjustment of the difficulty except by a resort to the dread arbitrament of force. It showed, as did their every movement for months and years, that they did not want peace or compromise, or anything of the sort—nothing in short but a dissolution of the Union. They fired upon the flag of the nation while the President was holding aloft the olive branch; declaring, as they did so, that were he to give them a clean sheet of paper, and ask them to write their own terms of compromise, they would not do it. This proved how greatly mistaken General SCOTT was in his first proposed plan of procedure.

Evidently the leading idea in General SCOTT's mind, when he wrote the above letter, was, to recommend a conciliatory policy, such as Mr. CRITTENDEN, and others, fondly imagined would avert the threatened catastrophe by placating the Southern leaders. But 'rule or ruin' was their deliberately adopted motto, and Gen. SCOTT soon had evidence that all mediation was vain—not because the new Administration, whose chief and most trusted counsellor he himself became, even from the day it began to exercise the functions of the government, adopted or sanctioned any harsh or irritating course, or because it refused to resort to any constitutional mode of adjusting the pretended causes of quarrel—but because, according to the testimony of the conspirators themselves, who had usurped the control of affairs in the Southern States, the hour they had long expected and prepared for had now come—their hour of opportunity to establish a government of their own, and lay the foundations of Society anew, on the corner-stone of Slavery.

Gen. SCOTT cordially approved of the policy of the Administration, and lent it all the support of his influence, not only while he was Commander-in-Chief, but since his retirement;—and this well-known fact puts the right interpretation on his letter. "Prince" JOHN VAN BUREN will in vain try to give it a false one, to suit his own purposes—purposes with which Gen. SCOTT is too true-hearted a citizen, and too honest and loyal a man, to have the least sympathy.

We may be permitted to remark, that Gen. SCOTT's reference to such a "young and able general" as a "Wolfe, a Desaix, or a Hoche," reads like a bitter satire on the generalship of the war, as it has been managed since his retirement, and especially by his immediate successor.

Gen. Kearney on Gen. McClellan and Some Other Generals.

WILKES' Spirit of the Times, of this week, publishes the following letter written by Major-General PHILIP KEARNY to O. S. HALSTEAD, Jr., of Newark, N. J., of which the public has already heard a good deal. In enclosing the letter for publication, Mr. Halstead writes:

NEWARK, New Jersey, Oct. 5, 1862.

EDITOR OF THE SPIRIT OF THE TIMES: Herewith find a copy of my letter to Gen. Kearney, which called forth his answer of the 4th of August, 1862. I also enclose that "famous letter." Use such portions of mine as may be deemed proper. Publish the Generals, as you have it, omitting the names of those generals, only, who have not been brought prominently before the public, for want of ability, generalship, loyalty, or by reason of excessive blundering. As an evidence of the faithfulness of the portraits given, I would state, that upon reading the letter, on separate occasions, leaving out names, to show different regular army officers, a Major General, Brigadier General, and a Captain, who, from his constant presence about Washington, on the Peninsula, and in Virginia, and on staff duty, plodded him familiar with all the leading officers. Each in turn filled the blanks correctly, and without hesitation; at the same time expressing their admiration and astonishment at the manner in which, as one of them expressed it, "Poor Phil had sketched the generals and their capabilities." I trust that General Kearney's letter will be copied widely, and read attentively. It is a voice from the grave, of one, to whom, those who knew him best, will accord the tribute of being above and beyond any small action, or mean motive. One, who, for his retaining right arm, would not willfully, misstate, pervert, or "set down aught in malice."

It is high time that the people had light and truth. The workings of political prejudice—a senseless, disgraceful, debasing, man-worship—"a monopolized telegraph, and a trammelled press," have done their worst to falsify the record, to blind and mislead.

Who so competent to open up that flood of light which must eventually illuminate the pathway of the "Army of the Potomac," as he who so gloriously participated in all its struggles and its trials, the brave, the gallant, the accomplished Kearney, its Hero and its Idol?

"Fiat justicia, coelum ruat."

Let justice be done though the heavens fall.

Your obedient servant, PAT HALSTED.

GEN. KEARNEY'S LETTER.

"HARRISON'S LANDING, Aug. 4, 1862.

"DEAR PAT—I thank you for your kind, long letter. You extend to me hope. You suggest withdrawing me and my Division out of this terrible position. With Pope's army, I would breathe again.

"We have no Generals. McClellan is the failure I ever proclaimed him. He has been punished, just as I at once comprehended the moves of the parties. He will only get us in more follies, more waste of blood, fighting by dribblets. He has lost the confidence of all. Nor has he a single officer about him capable of bettering us. Sumner is a bull in a china shop, and a sure enough blunderer. Sent his corps gratuitously at Fair Oaks. He is not now in his right place, and will be much worse. ——— is a small brain, ossified in a '4 company' garrison on the frontier. He was not 'of us' in Mexico, but in a rear column once saw a distant flash in a guerrilla fight. His skill is a myth, a poetical version of his own part at Bull's Run. Porter is good in nature, but weak as water—the apparent cant of all this disaster for his want of generalship on the Chickahominy. ——— and Franklin are talented engineers. They might make good Generals if they understood the value of elements in their calculations; as it is, they are dangerous failures.

"When ——— was drunk, he had some few men drowned before Yorktown. I know of no other feat of his. Franklin's battle of West Point was a most runaway picket fight of ours. His part on the Chickahominy was unpardonable. He sent over a division (his own,) was present but that side out of fire, and never interfered to prevent them from being sacrificed by driblets, and rendered a prey to their false position. I was horrified at it, as described by General Taylor, and all others. Is it surprising that I want to get out of this mess? Besides, they have sent me a Major-Generalship, like all these others, dating from 4th July, muddled in a batch of new and very ordinary junior officers. Do they forget that I was appointed 4th on the original list? That I, on the heels of Bull's Run, faced the enemy with a Jersey Brigade in advance of all others, McClellan, McDowell, et id omne genus, nearly forcing me to come back of the 'Seminary.' Do they forget me at Manassas? My Jersey Brigade that infected with panic the retiring enemy? Has Williamsburg never come to their ears? Oh, no! I really feel aggravated beyond endurance. Discipline becomes degradation if not wielded with justice. Patriotism cannot, amid all her sacrifices, claim that of self-respect. Generals, victorious in the past, are not called on to expose their troops, unless those brave men are acknowledged. Their identity in their chief's promotion, claims a date of their own high seals. Oh, no, I am nearer returning to the home I have given up, to the interests I have sacrificed, to my cherished wife, whose anxiety oppresses me, than I ever dreamt of in a war of 'the Union.' But if the infatuated North are weak enough to let this cruelly be managed by 'small men of small motives,' I am not willing to be their puppet.

"My dear Pat, I am too lazy, and too little interested, to dive into the future of this 'little box of hazards,' so do tell me—what do the people at the North look forward to in the future? I fear lest the war will die out in vapid imbecility.

"For McClellan, he is buried out. Never once on a battle field, you have nothing to hope from him as a leader of a column. How do they expect Pope to beat, with a very inferior force, the veterans of Ewell and Jackson? But these are episodes. We deceive ourselves. There was a people of old—it was the warrior Spartan, with his Helot of the field. The South have realized it. There was an ambitious people of recent times, and a conscription pandered to her invasions. At this time the South exemplifies them both. 'Peace, peace,' but there is no peace. No, not even with a disruptured Union. Let the North cast away that delusion.

"Draft we must, or the disciplined THOUSANDS of the South reclaim scrip in Philadelphia, and yet the true North must accept it, and quickly, to a man, or the moment it drags in debate, Maryland, Tennessee and Kentucky will cast past victories to the winds and rise with their nearly allied kin. My dear Pat, I shall be delighted when Henry can come on. As to Colonel Halstead, I think that his case is a type of the insane and unnecessary despotism introduced into the army, under the suspicion of McClellan and his very weak aids. It is now too late, but why was not the cavalry put in my charge at the commencement? Two nights ago the rebel batteries fired from across the river, and killed and wounded some thirty men. Last night Hooker started out on a crude expedition to Malvern Hills. He went out four miles, and came back again. Still, a 'false fuse' inquires the whole army. McClellan is dangerous, from the want of digesting his plans. He positively has no talents. Adieu. Get me and my 'fighting division' with Pope. With best regards, yours, KEARNY.

"To Mr. O. S. Halstead, Jr., Newark, N. J."

VERY DECIDED VIEWS.—The Cincinnati Gazette, of October 11, publishes a letter from Hon. W. C. Grier, of the Kentucky Senate, who has just been burned out of house and home by the marauding guerrillas of the rebel Morgan. Mr. Grier gives his present views in the following energetic language:

"Why is all this persecution of me? Is it because I condemned this wicked rebellion, urged a vigorous prosecution of this war, and in my place in the Senate of Kentucky, opposed the compromising policy of my own party? For this I am burned out and hunted out of Kentucky. I am now unequivocally for confiscation, subjugation, extermination, and hell and damnation."

GEORGE BANCROFT FOR CONGRESS.—The People's Union Convention of the Eighth Congressional District of New York, has nominated George Bancroft, as candidate for Congress in that District.

THE Chicago Tribune says a gang of one hundred K. G. C.'s recently attempted to lynch Dr. Owens, of Williamson county, Illinois, whom they supposed to be the author of a recent expose of their designs. The doctor escaped by concealing himself in the house of a friend.

How the Southern Democrats used the Democracy.

John C. Calhoun, in a conversation with the now venerable Commodore Stewart, in the year 1862, said:

"That we are essentially aristocratic, I cannot deny; but we can and do yield much to Democracy. This is our sectional policy. We are from necessity thrown upon and, solemnly wedded to that party, however it may clash with our feelings, for the conservation of our interests. It is through an affiliation with that party in the Middle and Western States we control, under the Constitutions, the Government of the United States; but when we cease thus to control this nation through a disciplined Democracy, or any material obstacle in that party which shall tend to throw us out of that rule and control, we shall then resort to the dissolution of the Union."

THE SECRETARY OF WAR.—A Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Clipper, says:

"Secretary Stanton, despite the clamors and falsehoods set afloat by this army of contractors, public plunderers, and shirking shoulder straps, is one of the best, most active and energetic men that has ever conducted the Department. He dispatches more important business in an hour than other men can do in a day. If he is brusque, he is honest and impartial. The same charges of "bearishness" used to be brought against the late statesman, Wm. L. Marcy; but beneath his rough exterior, there was a large heart and volume of brain. He was not often caught in the toils and snares of men—no more is Edwin M. Stanton. All men are not honest who seem to be so."

LOOK HERE.—Our friend JAMES ROBB, No. 89 Market street, has recently returned from the East with a large stock of

BOOTS AND SHOES,

Comprising all the different varieties and styles now in vogue; and having selected it himself from the Eastern manufacturers, is now prepared to offer to the public goods which he can recommend for neatness and wear.

We advise all those in want of neat and substantial coverings for the feet to call on Mr. ROBB, feeling confident they will be suited as regards quality and price.

Remember the place, 89 MARKET STREET.
