TUESDAY MORNING, OCT. 21. Our Want of Success, and the Cause

There are several dangers three now that did not exist at the beginning of this war, and they are all traceable to one cause, and that cause is the lack of earnestness and action in the prosecution of the great work of suppressing the rebellion and restoring the Union.

There has been no lack of earnestness reached as saveral months—what a difference it would began, were such seal and alacrity shown. When Treason and Rebellion struck the startling blow that aroused the nation from its slumber, and for a time made us all as one man, the President uslied for seventy-five thousand volunteers. Three hundred thousand instantly responded. Had he called for half a million, a million would have stopped forward. That was the great opportunity; but it was not improved. All that was attempted for the first three months was to guard the capital, and keep the rebels back to be an analyse of the instructive, debates on the measures of Mr. Gladstone, especially in reference guard the capital, and keep the rebels back to the Stamp Duties, and some other such sides. and action on the part of the people; for guard the capital, and keep the rebels back in a corner of Western Virginia.

At the end of three month half a million clunteers, for three years service, were called for, and promptly furnished; and at the same time a part of the army, under then suspected was harled against the of Ways and Means last session, we should rebel defenses at Bull Run—defenses, which have had a system of taxation founded rected, and of the position of which Mc-Dowell was ignorant—and there broken, cuted demoralized and ruined.

But great as was that disaster, the country rose majestically abore it. A young commander-in-chief, was called to take the place of the venerable and honored may have falling artength forbade active sorvice. The hearts of men of all parties clustered around him with unbounded counding the set of the country. When Gen. McClellan at length, in the month of May last, put the army of the Potomac in motion, he set himself down in front of Yorktown with a part of it, leaving another part under McDowell to guard the another part under McDowell to guard the approaches to Washington. This may have been very scientific, but those who looked that party to gain the ascendancy in the Window GUARDS, &c., Nos. 91 Second street and at things rather than at men could not see it; neither were they able to see any thing in the murderous affairs of Williamsburg What is Thought of the Submissionand Fair Oaks to increase their confidence ist Projects in England. and Fair Oaks to increase their confidence in scientific warfare. They do not do so in the conduct of their private affairs, nor in the as it is in Richmond, as intended to encourpolicy of their municipalities or their gov- age and help the rebels, and perhaps to ernment; and why should they do so in this place the whole nation at their mercy, dis-great struggle, which comes home closer to honoring our soldiers and giving victory to WARDING AND COMMISSION MERCHANT and their hearts, their purses, and their individual and world being, than any thing with which they ever had to do? It is their right and their duty to judge and more criticise, and, if need be, to denounce, either unfaithfulness or incompetency wherever found. How can they expect the man whom they have made the depository of their power, the instrument of their will and their Supreme Cemmander, to lay a strong hand upon men who have failed to falfill the just expectations of the country, if they shrink from even the expression of disapprobation? If the Government should fail in this great conflict, its failure may be justly attributed to this strange forbearance towards men who have long since demonstrated, that they have not done what they could; and that, with all their selence and exill, they have no heart for the work they have undertaken.

Principles of National Taxation.

The following judicious remarks on this important subject, are from the Philadelphis Piess. Evidently the writer had done what the framers of the Tax Law, passed during the last session of Congress, unfortunately failed to do, namely, prepared to understand the true principles on which to proceed in laying on taxes by gudying the ascertained results of experience in other countries—and especially, for various reasons, in England. It frequently struck us, as we read the arguments of the various speakers, pro and con., during the progress of the discussion on this subject, as they reached us several months—what a difference it would make on all sides, if the general role in the reached us several months—what a difference it would make on all sides, if the general role in the reached us several months—what a difference it would make on all sides, if the general role is a supplication to the subject, and the contempt of the discussion on this subject, as they reached us several months—what a difference it would make on all sides, if the general role, here and the care for the unity of the body of the body of the Morther Continent, but are passionately opposed to and invested of the serie in fact, of the cindividual members should be brought into subjection,—who are in fact, of the Collarge, continuents, and the true principle and simplicity—who wish to prevent metical simplicity—who wish to prevent metical simplicity—who wish to prevent metical simplicity—who wish to prevent of the Young Men's Mercantile Library Association of the voing Men

Ere long, no doubt, our whole system of national taxation, will be revised, improved, and systemized. The great principle of fair taxation is to come upon tax-payers in such a manner as will produce most money with least pressure upon the public. The pressure ought to graduate, so as to fall heaviest upon the rich. Our income-tax is copied from the impost which has become so productive in England, and is there complained of expressing a national faith."
