It seems that the rebel army have really evacuated Winchester. That movement may indicate a consciousness on their par that they are not able to cope with ou forces; or it may be some stratagem on their part, the nature of which we do not understand. We, however, incline to the former opinion. Had McCLELLAN moved upon Manassas last winter or spring, the ebel army would have done precisely what it has done now at Winchester; and if our commanders will now only follow them up, as they might have been followed up then. they may be thoroughly vanquished before the close of November.

The interior of Rebeldom must be pene trated and firmly held before we can hope for an end of the war. We may slaughter one another till doomsday along the Potomac, without arriving at any decisive reits; but let the main army of the rebels

Mr. Gladatone's "Peliverance" on American Affairs.

The summary sentence or two in which the telegraph, a few days ago, attempted to give us a general notion of what the English Chancellor of the Exchequer said about the "probable" issue of the Slave-holders' Rebellion, had no hint of the exceeding amiableness of the learned gentleman's tone; no hint of his tender regards for our imaginary wounded feelings under Mr. Gladstone's "Deliverance" on American Affaira.

glish aristocrats, and for the English government itself, unofficially, of course, to give all possible moral aid and support to the nascent oligarchy, which is fast ripening into a monarchical despotism, in the rebel slaveholding States of America. This though not expressly avowed, is exactly what Mr. GLADSTONE and his ministerial friends above mentioned, have been doing almost since the commencement of our contest with "Jefferson Davis and the other leaders of the South."

Hon. D. S. Dickinson, in a late speech at Brooklyn, said:

"How every reason to believe that the administration are arising to the full means the constitution of that country—and they would not wish to destroy their masters, however they might abuse or whip them. Cooper Institute in New York, on Saturday evening, there was some strong and carnest speaking. We have only room for a few brief extracts. Among the resolutions adopted was the following: Resolved, 1. That we regard the Confisca-Resolved, I. That we regard to Connection act and the President's Emencipation Proclamation as eminently just and constitutional measures, which should be sternly enforced. Mr. HAMILTON, of Texas, said:

mad, without striving at any decimer to sails; but let the main army of the rebels be once put upon the retreat, and kept so, and the thing is over. This, we think, is the case new, if our commanders will only press on. We know that the difficulty of getting supplies will increase as our army moves further and further from its base of operations; but that difficulty is not insuperable. In factit is one that must be met and overcome, or we may as well yield the contest st once.

Mr. Hamiton, of Texas, said:

I intend to contribute my humble efforts to the case in the fellowing supplies will be held at the same to see it; let them have that be audiful territory of Ponce de Leon, so graphically alluded to.

We infer, from what Mr. Hoye says, that he has traveled extensively, and mingled with all classes of that strange, castle-divided society. The following extract is the only allusion he makes to personal outgraph of the fellowing that the will be held at the same to see it; let them have that them have that the same tivery of Ponce de Leon, so graphically alluded to.

We infer, from what Mr. Hoye says, that he has traveled extensively, and mingled wit erate words of consolation, which, like Mr. T. J. Boyston, of Florida, was the would show how he would even go beyond the good Samaritan in compassion, and administer his oil and wine by way of antitipation;—we mean, before the thieves (among whom we have certainly failen) have yet been able to overpower us and leave us by the wayside, in such a plight as to appeal to the compassion of our "neighbors."

Therefore, it was well that a fuller report followed, showing us all these things; healing balm, he poured forth—as if he next speaker. We take a single point: Slavery too? Does he not now propose do so if the rebels will lay down their arm

With regard to this proclamation, about which we have heard so much, I believe it which we have heard so much, I believe it wish we we shall be sore all over—sore with wounded pride—sore with defeats in bat the more explicit cannot hold together." Nay, he is more explicit than one who deals with the fature; what he predicts is so near and certain, that he seems to regard us as already in the act of appealing to England, whom he prepares to meet us in the right spirit of a comforter.

But, Mr. Gladstors, there is no such aphare the fatures are considered in the solution of the union troops, and all this by compulsion; and I think it strange indeed if we should not divert this labor from that considered the union to the should be compulsion; and I think it strange indeed if we should not divert this labor from that object to it, and why should we? Another reason why I think this slave labor should be diverted is this: Tallahatchic county, Miss., has but 560 voters, and that county sends

But, Mr. Gladstore, there is no such appeal from the American People to England, or any other nation;—nor, with all due deference to your judgment, and notion of probabilities, is there going to be such. Your balmy words, your kindness, your tenderness, your compassion, your sympaths, are generous;—but your generosity is without an occasion—is superfluous.

There is an excellent old saying, Mr. Gladstore, which exploits before becoming generous—which excellent old saying you, and all who talk like you in England, especially your friends and follow-ministers, Palmerston and Russell, have altogether forgotten of late. If your Government—(that is, Palmerston and Bussell and yourself; for you three are the responsible heads of it)—had done what was just—if thad honestly carried out the case. what has actually occurred, that the former class of Englishmen would overlook the enormity of laying the corner-stone of their social system on African Slavery, when that foundation sustained an aristocracy, or an oligarchy; and that the latter would not care though its foundations were laid, like Millish's pandemonium, by the very devilse themselves, provided, only, that "No Taxife' was written above, and that the marrish' was written above, and that the marrish' was written above, and that the marrish' was written above, and the marrish' was written above, and the payments were promised to be reasonably prompt.

Mr. Glanscows, though a learned and able man, is, we fear, no better than some of our own learned doctors and able politicians. Like them, whenever it muits his parpose, he can close his eyes and his care of the interest of the women was old, and the other was parpose, he can close his eyes and his care of the women was old, and the other was parpose, he can close his eyes and his care of the women was old, and the other was parpose, he can close his eyes and his care of the women was old, and the other was parpose, he can close his eyes and his care of the women was old, and the other was parpose, he can close his eyes and his care of the women was old, and the other was parpose, he can close his eyes and his care of the women was old, and the other was parpose, he can close his eyes and his care of the women was old, and the other was parpose, he can close his eyes and his care of the women was old, and the other was parpose, he can close his eyes and his care of the women was old, and the other was parpose, he can close his eyes and his care of the women was old, and the other was parpose, he can close his eyes and his care of the women was old, and the other was parpose, he can close his eyes and his care of the women was old that would be appropriated to the part of the women was old, and the other was parpose, he can close his eyes and his care of the women was old that women was old the part o

Loyal Southerners Speaking.

At a meeting of Southern exiles at the Cooper Institute in New York, on Saturday evening, there was some strong and earnevening, there was some strong and earn-Synod, I preached to a large congregation of slaves; it was the largest congregation I over spoke to in my life. With one exception, that of the minister who sat beside me, they were all slaves, yet one-third of them were whiter I am; so that Slavery is not confined to color, because you often see red-haired and blue-eyed slaves. Another question is, will they come North? I would reply to this, that if Freedom is proclaimed South, they will not come North, because they love freedom, but they hate labor. They would prefer to go South. I saw a certain suggestion in the papers to give thoughts of the same of the s red-haired and blue-eyed slaves. Another question is, will they come North? I would reply to this, that if Freedom is proclaimed South, they will not come North, because they love freedom, but they hate labor. They would prefer to go South. I saw a certain suggestion in the papers to give them the State of Florida. I was glad to see it? let them have that beautiful teritory of Ponce de Leon, so graphically al-

States hereaster? I say their ways called hong as this institution of slavery exists. But let that institution be eradicated, and there is no obstacle to harmony. There is no feeling of resentment between the Maineites and Mississippians which may not pass ites and Mississippians which may not pass away, and as for the loyal Mississippians, they demand the protection of the Star-Spangled Banner, and have reasons to detest the protection of the Stars and Bars, as my poor discolored ankles now testify.

After the Southern gentlemen were through, the resolutions adopted, and the meeting about to adjourn, Horace-Grane and Mississippians will be meeting about to adjourn, Horace-Grane and Mississippians about to adjourn, Horace-Grane and Mississippians with the banking House and Mississippians which may not passed as a supplied to the Stockholders will be retained to the Stockholders will b ed, and with three cheers for the President's Proclamation and the loyal men of the gave his approbation to the Proclamation not as an expedient measure merely, but as a great necessity-absolutely essential the preservation of the government and the restoration of the Union.
