General Banks in New York.

There is an organization in New York known as "the Sons of Massachusetts."
Under their auspices a reception breakfast was given to Gen. Banks and staff, at the Astor House, on Friday last. It was a very pleasant and animated affair, and very pleasant and animated affair, and called forth several short and pithy speeches. After paying a warm and fitting tribute to the men of Massachusetts,

Gen. BANKS said: He sometimes felt as though, in spite o ary usage, he would like to touch upon sational difficulties under which we As a Yankee he was half-in-The fear of Turkish aggression has long the time to talk had not yet come. The people of this land had not yet been, sufficiently steeped in suffering. More States must be invaded mere hearthstones rendered desolate, before the people of this country will consent to talk with one another as they should. He could not go far in what he had to say, but shis he would declare as his earnest belief,—that no power, no! not all the powers on earth combined, could destroy this great. American Government when ence the people had been made to understand the real issue. [Tremendous and prolonged cheering.] Americans, however, will have to learn a little. They have, hitherto, thought there must be a short-out through everything, but here their idea is at fault—there is no short-out through everything, but here their idea is at fault—there is no short-out the very end. [Applause.] We must fight, and that, too, with a full appropression of the man with whom we hat. clined to talk, but as a man of some va-ried experience, he hesitated, for he thought the time to talk had not yet come. would have been a refugee in England, or somewhere else; unable to contract for ironclad pirates, instead of being at the head of a "nation" of corsairs and bandits, with British merchants and ship-builders as his allies.

Very well, if Great Britain will permit such work to go on within her own shores, be it so—America can better live without commerce than she can. If that Govern-Analysis of the previous inhabitants, was gradually collected into two sense of the course of years.

chalice will be pressed to her own lips one of these days with a vengeance. The whole world can play at that game; and this horrible drama, which began in Charleston harbor, may close on her own desolated shores and in her ruined cities.

But it behoves our Government to put But it behooves our Government to put forth its utmost energy in bringing this struggle to a termination; for if it is suffered to drag through another year, all Christeadom will be involved in the terrific imbroglio. It is in a manageable shape yet, and its dimensions are comparatively limited; but let the great powers of Europe once be drawn in, and no earthly power can avert a universal wreck.

Each of these officers is and neutenants. Lach of these omcors is magistrate and judge. He is in his village what a captain is on board a man-of-war.

The fear of Turkish aggression has long since disappeared, but the Christian Government continue short-cut in this war; it, must be fought through to the very end. [Applause:] We must fight, and that, too, with a full appreciation of the men with whom we hat this and this once understood, the rebellion will fall even should "unfenced desolation" mark every step of our path toward the consummation.

Brigadier General Buseren, in introducing Colonel Chickering, of the Fortyfirst Massachusetts, (agaliant officer, whose name is more associated with music than war,) said:

Massachusetts had no rival, and would have none, till her great enemy—American slavery—was put down. The first martyrs of America were from Massachusetts, and when the history of the war shall be written, he cared not how long it lasted, and when the history of the war shall be written, he cared not how long it hated, and when the history of the war shall be written, he cared not how long it hated, the first Massachusetts would be found the foremost to labor, and the last to leave the scene of conflict, as long as an idea remained to be fought for. Thank God, there were no peace men, no submissionists in the Forty-first regiment. Who would yield the Govor the American Government before these gly monsters can cross the Atlantic. Then you might welcome them as effective aids in future operations. To disarm suspicion it is popularly given out that this iron fiest is being built for the Chinese Government; but I need hardly tell you that Mr. Mason and his friends form one of the chief contracting parties.

The above is probably true enough; and if one of these British pirates, the Alabams, has committed such extensive depredations upon American commerce, a score, or even half a score, of similar vessels would suffice to sweep it from the ocean. The country will scon realize the frightful cost of delay in crushing out this febellion.
