Railroad Bridges Across the Ohio.—Two bridges are now in progress of erection across the Ohio, one at Steubenville, a permanent structure so high as to admit the passage of steamboats under it, or at least intended to be; the other at Parkersburg, to connect the main branch of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad with the Muskingum and Cincinnati Railroad. It is nearly above high water, and has a draw of 100 feet wide to admit the passage of boats on the river. There is some talk of building another four miles below Wheeling to connect the Wheeling branch of the Baltimore and Ohio road with the Central Ohio.

The idea entertained by some that the steamboat trade of the Ohio is decreasing is shown to be very erroneous by the following statistics compiled from the Annual Statement of the Commerce of Cincinnati:

The Rebel Propositions for Peace.

The special correspondent of the New York Tribune, at Washington, denies,

"the highest authority," the statement that Dr. Barnard had an interview with the President.

It is to be stated, on the same authority, that the President has no knowledge of the statements contained in the letter, and that no communication on that subject, or embodying such information, has been made to him by the President.

Leading Republicans deny all knowledge of the matter, and assert that this is the first time that Dr. Barnard has ever received any information whatever on this subject.

The Philadelphia Press is notificated that the rebels have given up their plan to invest the lines of communication with the West, and that they will now go to the Atlantic coast.

The LaFourche Courier of the

New York Times says:

"The news from Louisiana is that the city and island of New Orleans, which were entirely without especial interest, have been captured by the rebels, and are held in the hands of the rebels."

The negroes, by the way, were perfectly quiet until the rebels obtained a success in their rebellion.
