Descent upon Vicksburg.

We may soon expect stirring news from Vicksburg. The troops, after the capture and destruction of Arkansas Post, Duvall's Bluff and Des Arc, instead of proceeding up to Little Rock, returned again to Napoleon, and are going down the Mississippi in the direction of Vicksburg, in great force. Grant's and McClernand's armies and Porter's gunboat and mortar fleet are to move against the place together. The entire expedition has probably ere this gone forward from Memphis and Napoleon, and we may in a few days expect to hear the good news which its Government expects.

The rebels will put forth their utmost power of resistance; for from the effect of a defeat at that point, they would not, according to their own admissions, be able to recover; hence, the taking of the place will be no holiday work. The rebels are well prepared, and they will fight desperately. Another writer remarks: "General McClernand has been reinforced since his arrival here, and now goes down the river, leaving it open behind him, and intending to open it in front of him if he receives proper co-operation. If he does not, mark my word, he will fail. If Banks and Grant do not do their share promptly, this expedition will meet with disaster."

The Jackson (Rebel paper) says Grant's entire army is to participate in the next movement on Vicksburg. Meanwhile, the Confederates are making extraordinary preparations to resist the assault. The capture of Arkansas Post was quite a blow to the Confederate cause.

We append the following letter to the Cincinnati Gazette:

MEMPHIS, Jan. 22, VIA CAIRO, Jan. 24.

There is little news of importance outside of the movements of the various portions of General Gorman's expedition.

The army and gunboats at Post Ark, after blowing up the fort, filling the rifle pits, and demolishing everything that could be made the means of defence, left that region Thursday and Friday last, the divisions under Sherman first, McClernand subsequently. The Illinois forces below, excepting those under General Gorman, are concentrating at Milliken's Bend, for a further movement down the river.

The steamer Glasgow, which left Helena on Wednesday night, reports the advance of Gorman's troops there arriving from White river. The remainder were coming up. It was feared that the expedition would go as far as Duvall's Bluff, where the Little Rock and Memphis Railroad crosses for Little Rock. Here two pieces of cannon were found; they have been brought down from St. Charles by the Winnebago Rifle Whig. These pieces secured, the expedition had intended to land the cavalry at this point, and march direct on Little Rock, but recent bad weather had made the country impassable, and Gen. Gorman returned after seeing that even light draught gunboats had gone up the river as far as Des Arc. The gunboats accomplished something. Upon their arrival at Des Arc it was learned that the place was to be defended. The boats gained a position, opened upon the place, and soon, without much trouble, brought about a capitulation. Fifty Confederate prisoners were taken, and 1,500 stand of arms captured.

The taking of Arkansas Post has destroyed all confidence on the part of those in command of the defenses of White river, and at St. Charles and Duvall's Bluff, all ideas of opposing the Federal occupation seemed abandoned. Thus the White and Arkansas rivers are nearly cleared of Confederates.

Gen. Sherman's force passed Napoleon on Sunday for below.

Richardson's guerrillas, on the south side of the Hatchie, near Western, had been disbanded.

The bridge at Moscow settled, and is thought irretrievable. This occurs in the heavy rains which have swelled the rivers.

Blythe's guerrillas are hovering about Germantown, but the high state of Wolf river is sure protection to the Memphis & Charleston road. The Confederates are making slow progress in rebuilding the railroad toward Oxford, beyond which it is believed they have not penetrated.

From Rosecrans' Army.

A letter to the N. Y. Times, dated Nashville, January 17th, gives some important items of information. Gen. Rosecrans is by no means allowing affairs to stagnate in his Department. Several divisions of his army had at that time advanced some distance beyond Murfreesboro'. The rebel army were at Tullahoma and Shelbyville, and that it had been reinforced by a portion of the Virginia army under Longstreet, who superseded Bragg, was regarded as a well authenticated fact. The rebels were reported to be in a pitiable condition as regards many of the necessaries of soldiers. Their wounded, many of whom they succeeded in removing from the vicinity of Murfreesboro, were dying by scores because deprived of medicines and proper food. The conscripts, particularly those from Tennessee, were much dissatisfied, and were daily deserting. The whole army, in fact, was believed to be destitute of tents, shoes and comfortable clothing.

The writer gives some interesting facts relating to the capture of the boats on the Cumberland river, and the surrender of the gunboat Sidell. That boat was built at Nashville, and was rather a poor thing—clad with sheet iron, but not sufficiently so to resist the fire of a battery. The pilot and engineer were men of secession sympathies, and, it is thought, induced Lieut. Van Dorn to surrender. They were promptly paroled, as were the rest of the crew, except Van Dorn, whom they retained to be hanged for having ordered several rooms to be burned. So the crew say. Poor Van Dorn; his cowardice may cost him his life, and, if so, few will be sorry for the strange but terrible retribution. The writer remarks: "Notwithstanding the ill-fed and worse clothed condition of the rebels, it is an undoubted fact that they display an amount of daring and energy not approached by our soldiers."

Col. JOHN F. MILLER, commander of the 7th Brigade in Gen. Negley's Division, in his report of the part taken by his command in the battle of Stone river, speaks in terms of the highest commendation of the gallantry of Col. W. H. SIRWELL, of the 79th Pennsylvania Regiment, of which he is the commander.

The Battle of Hartville, Missouri.

ADDRESS OF GEN. WARREN TO HIS TROOPS.

The recent battle at Hartville, Missouri, appears to have possessed much greater importance than has been supposed. It brought to an ignominious end the rebel invasion, probably saving the State from a renewal on its soil of the terrible conflicts of the past, and certainly disarranging the entire campaign of the enemy in that quarter. The following address to the troops was issued by Gen. Warren after the battle:

"HEADQUARTERS, HOUSTON, Mo., January 16, 1863.

"Soldiers: You have fought one of the fiercest battles of the war. You have, with eight hundred men, actually engaged, met and repulsed six thousand of the enemy. Against their five pieces of artillery you had two. They had their choice of position, and planted their guns on a point which I had selected as being impregnable. With 3,600 in full view, you knew the odds against you. Completely surrounded except on one line of retreat, you fought for six hours, and then only fell back because your artillery ammunition was failing and your single outlet menaced. Not an article of property was captured, and your covering infantry held the field after the enemy had retired.

"History, in the larger battles of this great rebellion, may make no full mention of your names, but the truth that a determined column, more than the half of whom were never before under fire, stood like veterans without faltering or flinching before volley after volley, and charge after charge, will be a glorious memory to those who love you, and an honest pride in your own hearts.

"But I must not fail to do justice to the five hundred who, knowing that the enemy were still in force below, rushed with me to give them battle again, and when learned of their flank movement toward Houston, countermarched, making sixty-four miles through mud and rain in twenty-four hours, to defend your camp, and all this in perfect order and discipline, without a murmur or complaint.

"Nor may I pass without mention the cool and determined courage of the weak force left to defend. When my courier came in to warn of the approach of the enemy, with an order to hold to the last extremity, officers and men, invalids and convalescents, stood ready without panic or alarm to defend to the last.

"Soldiers: Your endurance and your valor are beyond praise; your accomplishment worthy of the highest commendation. Beyond the hope of reinforcement, you have held your position; fought the enemy; saved Lebanon and Rolla, with your post, from burning and sack.

"I give you my admiration of your heroism, and my thanks and gratitude that my name can be associated with this brigade as the proudest memory of my future life.

"FITZ HENRY WARREN, Brigadier General."

NEATNESS CARRIED TO EXCESS.—In Holland to keep cows' stables clean, the animals' tails are tied in brown paper, and placed on a shelf behind them. To keep replaced chewers from soiling the carpets, they spit in each other's pockets. A case of neatness carried to a still further excess is shown in the lower part of the city, in the person of a maiden lady, who whitewashes all her stove coal before using it. We get this from a "professor" in the whitewashing and carpet-shaking business.

"Did I understand you to call me a puppy, sir?" "Yes, sir, I called you a puppy." "Lucky for you! The insult is too small to notice; but had you called me a dog—an old dog—I would have knocked you down."

JERROLD once went to a party at which Mr. Pepper had assembled his friends and said to his host on entering the room, "My dear Mr. Pepper, how glad you must be to see your friends mustered!"

IMPORTANT TO OIL SHIPPERS AND REFINERS.—I have purchased five acres of desirable ground, situated on the Allegheny River and Allegheny Valley Railroad, where I have commenced filling up as an Oil Yard, for the exclusive purpose of barrelling, forwarding and storing Crude Oil. This property has unsurpassed advantages for the business, being located just outside the city limits, with no adjacent buildings, with a fine landing for boats, and where the eastern and western cars can be loaded on the ground. I am now prepared to take care of Oil Boats, and, with a steam pump, to barrel, and with fire-proof tight tanks to store 10th oil any length of time. Or I will lease ground to parties wishing to have their own tanks, and will build tanks on contract or superintend their construction.

Office at the yard, on the Citizens Passenger Railway. All communications addressed to DAVID KIRK, Box 908, Pittsburgh, Pa., will receive prompt attention. no8-1y
