If this be true, how was it possible for him to have so far departed from his duty as a ladge, as to assume cognisance of a matter which was not before him, and pronounce to have so far departed from his duty as a Jadge, as to assume cognisance of a matter which was not before him, and pronounce judgment on it in advance ? It is a new phase judgment on it in advance 7-it is a new phase of the judicial character, which, besides its impropriety and indeconcy, would obviously disqualify the individual from sitting in the case as a Jadage. If he be a loyal man it issens to me that he is singularly ignorant of the duties and proprieties of his judual char-actar. My own impression, with knowing him, would be that his purposes were to serve the cause of the rebellion.
